PREFACE

For clearness' sake we shall divide our preface into the following heads :—

- I. The Author—his life and writings.
- II. Writers on Bhartrihari :

- [A] Commentators, critics &c.;
- [B] Translators; and
- [C] Books about Bhartrihari.

- III. Works and writings wherein we find stanzas from Bhartrihari's Śatakas either with any particular note or notice about them or without anything of the sort.

- IV. Sequel.

- V. Places of interest relating to Bhartrihari.

- VI. A plea for the present edition.

Following this order we shall now take them one by one in hand, and dealing separately with each give our opinion upon all of them in turn.

I. THE AUTHOR—HIS LIFE & WRITINGS.

[A] BHARTRIHARI'S LIFE.

The father of Bhartrihari is said to have been one Gandharyasen (गन्धर्वसेन), who had also got a younger son Vikramāditya (विक्रमादित्य) from his second wife, the daughter of the chief of Dhârâ (धारा), the then capital of Mâlhwâ. Bhartrihari and Vikrama were, therefore, sons of the same father by different mothers. The chief of Dhârâ took great pains and care in educating his two grandsons, who soon acquired mastery in the several Sâstrâs, Laws, Ethics, Archery, Music, Dancing and all other polite arts and princely accomplishments. Though the old chief liked both his grandsons, yet his love was naturally stronger for Vikrama than Bhartrihari. Consequently, after finding the former quite well-up in every branch of Literature, Science and Art, he being himself devoid of any male issue, one day thought of giving his Râjya to Vikrama, and summoning him to his presence told him his heart's wish. But Vikrama nobly answered him thus. "It is not proper for me to reign before my elder brother; please, therefore, let Bhartrihari rule over the State and I will conduct the administration as his prime minister." The old Râjâ was quite pleased with the high-mindedness of young Vikrama, and subsequently through Vikrama's earnest entreaties, he made Bhartrihari the king of his territory. Vikrama thereupon changed the capital of Mâlhwâ from Dhârâ to Ujjein, and there gave himself heart and soul to the good government of the country, as the prime minister of his elder brother. Bhartrihari, though well-versed in the Sâstrâs, fell so much in love of women that he passed day after day, and night after night in the seraglio, and left every thing pertaining to the State into the hands of his brother. Vikrama, on whose hands the onerous and responsible duties of government did not hang heavy, was, however, very sorry for the dissolute conduct of Bhartrihari, and he spared no pains to estrange the king's heart from women of whom he had a large number as his wives and mistresses, and devote his attention to the affairs of the king-dom God had put into his trust. But, as mostly common in such cases, the more he offered his sound and wise counsels, the further went the heart of Bhartrihari from Vikrama; so much so that disaffection took its root into the former's mind, and the result was that the once loving brothers soon became inveterate enemies to each other. The fire of hatred was kindled with increased strength by the fuel of Zenânâ intrigue and curtain influence which had quite enslaved the man in Bhartrihari. In the end, Vikrama was cruelly forced to take off his hands from the premiership and go abroad into the country as an exile, leaving Bhartrihari to himself and his loves.* After his leaving Ujjein, Vikrama travelled through-out India Proper, and was once near Dâccâ in Eastern Bengal, where he lived for some time and established himself. This place is still known as Vikrampur after him.

Having nothing more to do with Vikrama and his movements, we again return to Ujjein and find Bhatrihari to be daily sinking more and more into luxury

* Colonel Todd says that Bhartrihari, the eldest son of Gundrupsen, was so devoted to wife that he neglected the affairs of government, which mode his borthor expostulate with him. This coming to his wife's ears, she insisted on the banishment of Vikrama (See Todd's "Annals & Antiquities of Rajasthân," Vol. II p. 369 foot note, popular edition Calcutta 1884.)

and licentiousness. As he never cared a straw for the good government of his kingdom, his subjects became totally tired of his recklessness, and becoming disgusted with his vices they were forced to disregard his authority. Anarchy soon came into being, and there was nothing but disorder and confusion throughout Málwâ. In the meantime it so happened that the henpecked husband was one day convinced of the infidelity of his queen† through the present of some virtuous fruit by a pious Brâhmana.† Her infidelity being clearly discovered, the Râni rushed away from her husband's presence and dashed herself to pieces by falling down from the heights of the palace. Bhartrihari then took another wife, Pingalâ (पिङ्गला), with whom he soon became attached as before. One day having gone deers shooting he saw that one of his shikarees who had shot a buck being himself bitten by a venomous snake was soon laid a corpse on the ground. But the thing which struck him most was that the doe of the dead buck came to the spot and threw herself dead on her husband's antlers; and similar to this was the case of the shikaree's wife who, on discovering the death of her husband, burnt herself with her lord on her selfmade pyre. The Rājā ran home in amazement and explained to Pingalā the wonderful events of his day's excursion. But Pingalā, to his great surprise, coolly remarked that there was nothing strange and extraordinary in the story; for a true suttee could even burn herself without having recourse to fire. Hushing up the matter for sometime, the king again went out shooting in the forest, and, to put to test the truth and fidelity of Pingalā, he sent one of his attendants to the queen with his clothes soaked in blood to report his death by a tiger. On hearing the sad tidings Pingalā, calmly (to all outward appearance) took over the Rājā's bloody clothes, put them on the ground, made her* last bow to her husband's accoutrements and rose no more. The Rājā, when he came to know the heart-rending catastrophe, was quite overwhelmed with grief, left the palace and went out to forest to lead the life of a pious ascetic so admirably depicted by him in his Vairāgya Śataka.* There he met with the great Yogi Gōrakshanāth (योगी गोरक्षनाथ) who initiated him into the secrets of Mysticism. It is generally believed here that Bhartrihari, by his austere practices of yōga, attained to immortality.

[B] HARTRIHARI'S WRITINGS.

The Three Śatakas on Nīti, Śringāra and Vairāgya, the Vākyapadiya (वाक्यपदीय, a grammatical commentary in terse and pithy Sanskrit prose), and the Bhattikāvya (भट्टिकाव्यम्, a Grammatical poem) are the works which are generally ascribed to Bhartrihari. Almost all the scholars who have made their acquaintance with Bhartrihari and his works are unanimous in their opinion that Bhartrihari is the undisputed author of the Śatakas and the Vākya-padīya which furnishes us with a certain clue to the solution of the much disputed question of Bhartrihari's age and authorship. But as to Bhartrihari's authorship of the Bhattikāvya different persons hold different opinions. However erudite discussions on the point by Messrs. Colebrooke, Telang, Peterson &c. have proved it beyond any shadow of doubt that Bhattikavi. (भट्टिकवि) the author of the भट्टिकाव्य is quite a different person, and he cannot be identified with Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) the author of the Śatakas. To make Bhartrihari the author of the भट्टिकाव्य there is no stronger ground than the identity of name. Bharata (भरत) in his commentary on मही gives the name of the author as भर्तृहरि, but says nothing more about it. In another commentary of भट्टिकाव्य which has been published in Calcutta, the author is described as the son of Śrī Swāmi (श्री स्वामि) and as a great Grammarian. This opinion is also corroborated by Colebrooke in his essay on Sanskrit and Prākṛit Poetry where he remarks,—"The author was भर्तृहरि, not, as might be supposed from the name, the celebrated brother of विक्रमादित्य, but a Grammarian and poet who was son of श्रीधरस्वामि as we are informed by one of his scholiasts विद्याविनोद." According to Bohn, भर्तृहरि the Grammarian and author of भट्टिकाव्य is of a later date than भर्तृहरि the author of the Śatakas with whom he is erroneously confounded. Dr. Bhāu Dāji is of opinion that भट्टी was probably the son of भर्तृहरि. Dr. Rājendra Lal Mitra in his notices of Sanskrit Manuscripts Vol. VI. p. 145 concludes that भट्टी and भर्तृहरि are two distinct personages.

[C] AN ESTIMATE OF THE ŚATAKAS.

The Satakas are not mere collections of elegant sayings from different authors as suggested by some, because a certain link of thought and diction connecting the stanzas distinctly points to their being written by one and the same hand. Prof. Tawney remarks that the terse and epigrammatic character of these stanzas distinguishes them from the mass of Indian Literature and brings them more and more into accordance with European canons of taste.

Prof. Lassen, in his 'Indische Alterthums kunde' (Vol. II p./174), expresses his opinion that this character "renders them conspicuous among the productions of the Indian Muse. They place before us in terse and pithy language the Indian views about the chief aspirations of youth, manhood and old age; about love, about concern with the things of this world, and about retirement from them into lonely contemplation. On account of the perfect art with which they are composed, these short poems are worthy of being ranked among the masterpieces of Indian Genius. Some of them are connected in sense, as the description of the seasons, others form a whole by themselves and may most fitly be compared to miniature paintings as presenting to us a complete picture in the narrow frame of one strophe."

II. WRITERS ON BHARTRIHARI.

(A) COMMENTATORS, CRITICS &c.

1. In the "Asiatic Researches" Vol. IX p. 141, Bhartrihari is said to have reigned for fourteen years and to have then been succeeded by his younger brother Vikramādita. It is also maintained that Bhartrihari himself founded the era.

2. Dr. Bhāu Dāji, in his paper on Kālidāsa, questions the contemporaneity of Bhartrihari and Vikrama, and says:—"He (Bhartrihari) is commonly but erroneously supposed to be a brother of Vikrama, as the 5th couplet of Vairāgya Sataka shews, Viz: that the author was an eminent poet dissatisfied with the reception he met with at the courts of several princes whom he visited in hope of reward."*

Dr. Bhāu Dāji also speaks of Bhartrihari as one of the nine gems.*

* The couplet here alluded to is उत्खानं निधि &c, from a careful perusal of which we cannot, however, endorse the opinions of Dr. Bhau Daji. The point has also been elaborately discussed & refuted by Mr. Telang. (See Bombay Sanskrit Series No. XI p. 19)

* For the enumeration of the "Nine gems", see our note on stanza 1 of Niti.

At another place, confounding Bhartrihari with Bhartrimañdhya (भर्तृमेण्ड), he makes Bhartrihari a contemporary of Kālidāsa.

3. Dr. Bohlen countenances the theory that the three Śatakas are mere compilations made by Bhartrihari, a mere collection of "elegant extracts" from the works of previous writers.†

Von Bohlen accepts the identity of the Bhartrihari of the Śatakas and the Hari of the Vākyapadīya.‡

On the authority of Roger, Bohlen relates that Bhartrihari had 300 wives, and was addicted to a voluptuous life. But having been severely reprovved by his father for his dissolute conduct, he repudiated his wives, and collected, not composed, these Śatakas by making selections from older writers.

Von Bohlen published in 1833 at Berlin the first European Edition of the Śatakas.

4. According to Prof. Colebrooke, some other person than Bhartrihari had probably put forth these Śatakas under Bhartrihari's name. §

5. Pandit Durgā Prasād of Jeypore, in conjunction with Dr. P. Peterson, writes that Bhartrihari

§ See Colebrooke's Essays Vol. II.

6. Mr. K. T. Telang adheres to the tradition of Bhartrihari's full authorship of the Satakas.†

In Telang's opinion Bhartrihari probably flourished somewhere later than Kālidāsa and a good deal earlier than the beginning of the 6th. century A. C. It is based on the following two reasons :—

(1) There is a stanza‡ in the Nītisataka which is also found in the Panchatantra which may safely be taken to have been composed not latter than 500 A. C. Therefore, Bhartrihari must have flourished at least half a century before that date. (2) Again, from stanza 95 Niti. Parashurāma is regarded as an incarnation of Vishnu, but it is doubtful whether Kālidāsa held the same opinion.

Bhartrihari must, therefore, be later in age than Kālidāsa.§

Mr. Telang again says :— Vikrama, the founder of the Samvat Era, flourished about 56 B. C. But granting Bhartrihari to be the author of Vākyapadiya, we cannot accept him to be the brother of this Vikrama. Because, it is clear from the Vākyapadiya that it were Chandrāchārya (चन्द्राचार्य) and others who brought the great commentary of Pâtanjali (पातंजलि) into general use, and according to Rājatarangini, Chandrâchâryya and his colleagues flourished in the reign of King Abhimanyu (अभिमन्यु), i. e., between 45 and 65 A. C.

Led by the observations of Dr. Kern in his Preface to the Brihatsamhita, where he argues that Vikramâditya according to the unanimous testimony of Hindu Astronomers, of the Arabian Astronomer Albiruni, of Kalhana Pandita (कल्हणपंडित), and of Hiouen Thsang, was commonly regarded as the founder of what is known as the Shaka (शाका) or Shâlivâhan Era (शालिवाहनसम्बत्), and as having flourished about 78 A. C., and not 56 B. C., Mr. K. T. Telang after remarking that this will enable us to reconcile the several statements which we receive from tradition, thinks as a conclusion, grounded on a basis not very unstable, that Bhartrihari flourished about the close of the first and the beginning of the second century of the Christian Era.*

7. Prof. Lassen is of opinion that the composition of the three hundred short poems, which by universal tradition are ascribed to Bhartrihari, must be placed before the overthrow of the Gupta Dynasty. He further places the date of the author of these Satakas at the end of the third century A. C., but he does not accept the tradition that he was Bhartrihari.

* Bombay Sanskrit series No XI p. XVI.

8. Relying upon a Chinese tradition, Prof. Max Müller thinks Bhartrihari to be a Buddhist.† The Professor also suggests that Kshapanaka (क्षपणक) may be another name of Bhartrihari. *

9. Dr. P. Peterson.

For Dr. P. Peterson's opinion see under Pandit Durgâ Prasâd (5).

10 M. Regnaud, in the Preface to his prose translation, contends that the legend connecting Bhartrihari and Vikramaditya cannot be accepted, as some of the stanzas attributed to Bhartrihari must be subsequent to the period of Shankarâchâryya (शंकराचार्य). †

11. Abraham Roges.

For Roger's opinion on Bhartrihari, see under Bohlen (3).

12. According to Mr. Sashagiri Sâstri King Vikramâditya was the son of a Brahman named Chandragupta (चन्द्रगुप्त) who took four wives, each of the four principal castes. Four sons, viz:-Vararuchi (वररुचि)

| 'The Buddhist flavour' which Prof. Max Muller smells in the Satakas, is however very difficult to be detected by us after a careful study of the poem. Moreover the theory will utterly fall to the ground when we find in the body of the work of references to the Trinity (stanza 1 in the Srîngara Sataka), to the ten incarnations of Visnu (stanza 95 Niti) to the Vedas, Smritis, and Puranas (stanza 79 in the Vairâgya Sataka) and to the Vedantic character of the whole poem especially to that of the opening stanza of Niti.

* See note on stanza 1. in Niti.

† For the refutation this theory, see Bombay Sanskrit Series No. XI pp. IX & X.

Vikrama (विक्रम), Bhatti (भट्टी), and Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) were born to him respectively by his Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra wives. Vikramāditya became King, and Bhartrihari served him as his prime minister.

13. After quoting the remarks of Lassen, Prof. Tawney says :—

“Considering the great uncertainty which attaches to Hindu Literary History, we may perhaps consider ourselves fortunate that there is something like a consensus as to the date of these poems. A century more or less is, after all, of trifling moment in Indian Chronology. The question of their authorship we must be content to leave in the midst in which it has been involved by the traditions of Indian sages and the conjectures of Western critics. So much at any rate is certain that our author, if not himself a king was thoroughly at home in the detail of Indian Court life.”*

Prof. Tawney in his foot-note on the word ‘परिजन’ (which occurs in stanza 18 of the Vairāgya Sataka) thinks that this expression falls in with the legend that Bhartrihari was a king and quitted his throne in a fit of disgust.†

14. Prof. Vaman Shivram Apte M. A., at page 1192 of his Sanskrit-English Dictionary has the following :—

भर्तृहरि Author of the three Satakas and of the Vākya-padtya. Mr. Telang gives it as his opinion that he must have flourished about the close of the first and the beginning of the second century of the Christian era. Tradition makes him brother of King Vikrama, and if this Vikrama be accepted as the same who defeated the Mlechhas in 544 A. D. we must suppose Bhartrihari to have flourished in the latter half of the sixth century.

15. Prof. Wilson (in his Vishnu Purāna) elaborately argues that the earliest of the Purānas cannot have been written long before the 8th. or 9th. century of the Christian era. As Bhartrihari clearly mentions the Purānas in stanza 79 of the Vairāgya Śataka, we are to infer that he must, therefore, be later than the 8th. or 9th. century A. D.*

(B) TRANSLATORS &c.

The first translation of Bhartrihari's Śatakas into any European tongue was that by a Christian missionary Abraham Roger who published in 1651 A. D. "A History of the Religion of the Brahmans" in which were contained two hundred proverbs of the sage Bhartrihari, translated into Dutch. The stanzas on Niti

* In order to refute this theory, we have to state that Shankaracharya, who is generally and rightly acknowledged to have flourished in the 8th century A. D. has actually quoted the Puranas in his commentary on the 'Śvetāshvatara Upanishada. Besides this, the Puranas in general and the 'Vāyu-purana' in particular, are even referred to by Bānabhatta (बाणभट्ट) in his famous work "Kadambari" (कादम्बरी). Bana's age is now fixed about the beginning of the seventh century A. D. Prof. Wilson's argument is therefore untenable:

were styled by him as "the reasonable conduct of men," and those on Vairāgya as "the road which leads to heaven."

This work was subsequently translated into French in 1670. A. D.

Prof. Tawney says that the Centuries of Bhartrihari are also contained in the Sanskrit Anthology of Haeberlin. M. Galanos translated the Nīti and Vairāgya Satakas into Greek.

They were included by Prof. Böhrttingk in his "Indische Sprüche St. Petersburg, 1863-65 A. D.

They were translated into French by M. Hippolyte Fanche in 1852 and by M. Regnaud in 1875. A. D.

Vāman Pandit has translated the stanzas into Marathi.

In 1795 A. D. H. H. the Mahārāj Śawāi Pratap Singhji of Jeypore translated the three Satakas of Bhartrihari into Bhāshā verse, under the title of नीतिमंजरी, श्रुतारमंजरी, and वैराग्यमंजरी chiefly consisting of the Chappaya (छपय) verses, which make the translation go by the popular name of Partāpa Singhji's Chhappayas, ignoring altogether the few, Sorathās (सोरठा) and Dohās (दोहा) which also form its part.

One Pandit Rishabha Deva Śāstri of Jodhpore has recently translated the three Satakas into Hindi. This book was published in 1894 A. D. by the Gyānsāgar Press, Bombay.

An anonymous translation of Bhartrihari's Nīti and Vairāgya Satakas into English prose was published in the Subodha Prakāsh Press at Bombay. The book is entitled "The Proverbial Philosophy of Bhātrihari."

Prof. Tawney has made an elegant vertical translation into English of the Niti and Vairāgya Satakas of Bhātrihari. This book was published at Calcutta in 1877 A. D. under the title of "The Two Centuries of Bhātrihari."

Mr. Durgā Prasād, Editor "Harbinger" of Lahore, has also translated in 1889 the aforesaid two Satakas of Bhātrihari into English prose. Both these Satakas are published separately and called Maharāja Bhātrihari's Niti Sataka and Maharaja Bhātrihari's 100 couplets on Renunciation.

(C) BOOKS ABOUT BHARTRIHARI.

Now we have come to that part which relates to those books which give us some account of Bhātrihari's life. Had we been fortunate in this we would not have much difficulty in fixing the chronology of Bhātrihari and giving an authentic record of his life on the authority of stubborn facts. But, to the great disappointment of all, our information in this respect is limited to two sources viz :—(1) Bhātrihari Nirvedam "भर्तृहरिनिर्वेदम्" and (1) Bhātrihari's Khyalas (ख्याल).

(1) BHARTRIHARI NIRVEDAM (भर्तृहरिनिर्वेदम्).

It is a dramatical work in Sanskrit by Hariharopadhyāya (हरिहरोपाध्याय). Unfortunately, however, we do not know anything positively about Hariharopadhyaya's life except the fact of his being a Maithila Pandit. As for the full information of the work, we would here subjoin a clear and succinct synopsis of the Sanskrit play into English prose.

BHARTRIHARI NIRVEDA NATAKAM

BY. HARIHAROPADHYAYA.

ACT I,

Bhartrihari meets his Râni Bhânumati (रानीभानुमती) after long separation, for which the latter expostulates with him, and the Râjâ makes some religious excuse for the prolonged absence from her. In the meantime, seeing a suttee mounting the blazing pyre of her dead husband, the Râjâ extols her conduct to the skies before the Râni; but she remarks that she deos not see the propriety of a suttee's having recourse to real fire, when the fire of separation is quite sufficient to burn her immediately to ashes. Though a little incredulous, Bhartrihari then agrees with his Râni and takes his leave of her to go out shooting, to which she reluctantly and sorrowfully consents, on the condition of her being allowed to remain standing at the gate anxiously looking out the path of his speedy return.

Act. II.

Opens with the dialogue of maid servants upon the sudden death of their Mistress (Râni Bhânumati), who, while standing at the gate, soon became lifeless on hearing the (false) news of Bhatrihari being slain by a tiger. The Râjâ, on his return to the Capital, finds the scene full of great sorrow and grief, and on knowing the corpse being taken to the crematorium hastens to that place and there mourns and weeps like a child and strictly forbids his men to set fire to the pyre on pain of precipitating himself into the burning logs.

Act. III.

Sorrowing over the corpse of his Râni, Bhartrihari sees at a distance that a Yogi is excessively weeping over the breakage of his earthen dish. The Rājā goes to him and tries to pacify him by many wise counsels, but the Yogi is obdurate and goes extolling the virtues of his dish and bemoaning its irreparable loss more and more on account of his being himself the cause of its sudden destruction, for he dropped it down to test its strength. The plot of the dialogue is so framed that all the arguments put into the mouth of the Yogi are applicable even more strongly to the Rājā for his grieving over Bhānumati's loss. Bhartrihari, though he recognizes all this in his heart, yet still persists in consoling the Yogi by alluding to the transitoriness of all things in the world and the futility of man's grief over what he has no control. The Yogi here assails the Rājā with his own argument and observes:—

परोपदेशे पाण्डित्यमिदम्मुदस्य गीयते
तमः समाश्रितस्येव दीपस्यान्यप्रकाशनम् ।

Being struck with the cogency of the remark Bhartrihari then recognizes the Yogi to be no other than Gorakshanath (गोरक्षनाथ) himself, and the latter acknowledges himself to be the same, and to have intentionally assumed the character in order to dispel the unavailing sorrow from the Rājā's mind. Bhartrihari soon lays himself prostrate at his feet and requests from him the easiest road to self-knowledge and to this Gorakshanath thus replies:—

त्रिषयेभ्यः समाहृत्य मनः शून्ये निवेशय ।
स्वयमानन्दमात्मानं स्वप्रकाशमुपैष्यसि ॥

Act. IV

The prime minister is pleased to find the Rājā joyfully sitting with the Yogi and then he ventures to ask his permission to cremate the corpse of Bhanumāti. But strange to say that his master replies to have no concern with the world. Devatilak (देवतिलक), the minister, then remonstrates with him but to no purpose.

Act V.

Opens with the meeting of Bhartrihari with Bhānumati who is restored to life through the mystic powers of Gorakshanath. Bhānumati tries to embrace her husband but the Rājā runs and avoids her. She, thereupon, exerts her fair charms but in vain, and, failing in these, she resorts to the means of bringing her young son before the Rājā who is still indifferent to them.

The requests of the prime minister also prove fruitless. Gorakshanath then advises the minister to desist from his useless endeavours and to place the Rājakumara on the Gaddi for whose protection he will exert his own influence with that of the Rājā. He then consoles Bhanumati with the hope of again meeting (never to part from) her lord Bhartrihari after his obtaining immortality and here the play ends in happiness to all.

—oo—

The reader will see for himself how far the play coincides with our Bhartrihari's life in the beginning, and in what particular points it differs from it.

(2). BHARTRIHARI'S STREETS PLAYS OR MELODRAMAS.

These street plays are acted all over India and are very popular. They relate that King Bhartrihari was very fond of his wife Pingalā (पिंगला). He one day went shooting the wild deer and made his mark on a big buck. His does, thereupon, remonstrated with the Rājā and entreated him to spare the buck and take instead the lives of as many of them as he pleases, because his death will make them all widows. But the Rājā turned a deaf ear to these requests and shot the buck dead on the spot. The exasperated does thereupon uttered a Shap (curse) against the Rājā that the days of his Rājya are numbered, for he shall have soon to abdicate the Kingdom and roam about in the forest as a hermit leaving his wives no better than widows. His meeting with Gorakhnath is then related at length and the Yogi after fully testing the veracity of the Raja's request makes him his pupil. The plays also speak of Bhartrihari as king and a brother of the celebrated Vikramāditya.*

European scholars will no doubt laugh that I make much of these trifling plays. But I would beg permission to remark that the fact of their having survived so long must be a sufficient guarantee of their being founded on authenticated historic and real life. A lie cannot last long. The remarkable incidents of Bhartrihari's life being framed into a play which is so popular with the general public speaks much of the high esteem and honor in which Bhartrihari is still held by them.†

* The writer of these lines can himself attest to these vulgar plays being acted at many places in Rajputana as at Jeypore, Jodhpore and Bikanir, generally during the months of the Spring.

† In the शनिकथा or शनिचरजीकी कथा, a poetical narration in vernacular of Vikrama's calamities, Bhartrihari is clearly and undoubtedly spoken of as the elder brother to Vikramaditya.

III .

As for the different works wherein the Ślōkas from Bhartrihari's Śatakas have been traced out, we would only beg to draw the reader's attention to their respective footnotes where full particulars have invariably been given of them. However, we have also thought it advisable to arrange them for brevity and clearness, sake, in a tabular form which will enable the reader to make a prompt and ready reference to them at a moment's time. It needs only be stated that the numbers given in this list will be found corresponding to those of the stanzas as arranged in the Nīti, Śringāra, and Vairāgya Śatakas of the present edition, and not to the numbers of the verses of the works or books to which they are traced.

From this diagram it will be easily seen that we have traced out a large number (which amounts to no less than 350) of Bṛhatrihari's Ślōkas from these Satakas to the 43 works enumerated above, where many of them have however figured more than once. Out of these books some have been unscrupulously acknowledged to be older than the 6th. century of the Christian era. Taking the aforesaid 350 stanzas, we may safely point out that no less than 80 of them have expressly been quoted under Bṛhatrihari, 40 have been quoted under different authors and 137 have been quoted anonymously. Now, adding them together we get a total of 256 stanzas which are distinctly marked as quotations either from Bṛhatrihari or others, and thus there is left comparatively a very small number (viz 93) to be differently accounted for. Granting that the Aṣṭaratna, Guṇaratna, Nītipradīpa, Pañchatantra, Pañcharatna, Bhōjaprabandha, Śāntisataka, Śṛiṅgāratilaka, Śṛiṅgaravindu, Śādratna, Saptaratna, Sūktāvali and Hitōpādāśa are mere compilations and not genuine compositions of their several authors, and deducting the sum of 3, 1, 2, 21, 2, 3, 25, 1, 1, 1, 1, 8, and 12, (or 81) stanzas which occur respectively in them, we have now to face only an insignificantly small number of stanzas (viz 12), of which 1 is found in the Amarusaṭaka, 1 in the Atmānuśāsanakāvya, 1 in the Chaturvargasangraha, 1 in the Chāṇakyaṣataka, 2 in the Prabōdhachandrodāya, 1 in the Mahānātaka, 1 in the Mudrārākṣasa, 1 in the Mṛichhakatika, 1 in the Vasiṣṭhasāra and 2 in the Vairāgyaṣataka (Padmānanda's). Amongst these twelve, 6 will be found to have been on other than those which have already been accounted for as quotations, and one as occurring twice, thus reducing the number ultimately to 4, of which 1 stands in the Prabôdhachandrôdaya, 2 in the Vairâgyasataka of Padmânanda, and 1 in the Mrichhakatika and Prabôdhachandrôdaya both. Here I think we may conveniently drop this point without further comment.

This line of argument will, it is hoped, furnish some clue to the solution of Bhartrihari's age, as well as to the conclusion of these Satakas being considered a genuine composition or a mere compilation by Bhartrihari.

To do full justice to the subject I cannot help bringing to the notice of the reader that leaving out the number of times a stanza has made its appearance in the foregoing table we may safely observe that out of the total of 326 stanzas as given in this edition no less than 182 have been found to exist in the 43 pieces enumerated above, and that of these 182 nearly 40 verses have figured from three to seven times in the diagram. This gives us a very distinct and indisputable proof of the proverbial and substantial popularity the Satakas have so deservedly enjoyed from the very date of their production to the present day.

IV. SEQUEL.

After writing so much in the preceeding portion of the Preface, it is not necessary to dwell at great length on giving out the conclusions we have arrived at, regarding the following questions of modern critics and scholars :—

(1) Are the Śatakas either a mere collection of elegant extracts from several writers or a genuine composition by a single author?

(2) Who is the author of the Śatakas?

(3) What is the approximate date of the composition of this work?

(4) What other works are written by the author of the Śatakas?

(5) Was the author of the Śatakas himself a king and the brother of the celebrated Vikramāditya, the founder of the Samvat Era?

In answering these questions we would beg the reader's indulgence to condense our views in as small a space as possible, for everything is to be based on previous data which have already been given in full.

(1) From the appearance of several Ślokas in many of the current Sanskrit works it is argued that the Śatakas are a mere collection of elegant extracts from numerous authors. But if we study the point a little carefully we will find that most of the works in which they are met with are in themselves mere collections and not compositions e. g. the Pancharatna, Sadratna, Saptaratna, Ashtaratna, Hitôpadeśa, &c. Whereas in others as काव्यानुशामनं, काव्यप्रदीपः, काव्यालङ्कारः, सुभाषितावलिः, शार्ङ्गधरपद्धतिः &c. &c. the Ślokas are merely quoted either anonymously or as Bhartrihari's or as some others'. Again, there are a few, very few, say some twelve Ślokas, which are found in works like the Amarusaṅkha, Mudraârâksasa &c. These may harmlessly be considered as interpolations either in the Satakas or in the works themselves. Besides, there is a certain threadlike thought which pervades them all and unites them into one whole. We are therefore in a position to say that the Satakas are a genuine work from the pen of some particular person. *

(2) Having thus decided the first question, it is not very difficult to arrive at a definite conclusion upon the authorship of the Satakas. When men like the authors of “दशरूपवलोकः” [२७ नीति०] (composed in the time of मुञ्ज uncle to राजाभोज), “सुवृत्ततिलकम्” [२२ वैराग्य०, १२ श्रृंगार०] (composed about the middle of the 11th. century, A. D.), “उदाहरणचन्द्रिका” [७१ वैराग्य०] and others have quoted some of the stanzas from these Satakas distinctly as Bhartrihari's, it is mere childlike obstinacy still to question the authorship of Bhartrihari, because besides their extensive knowledge of Sanskrit Literature and the wide range of their information, they were unquestionably nearer than we to the author of the Satakas by many centuries, the difference between us and him-being undoubtedly less nearly by 8 centuries in the case of the authors of Dasaroopâwaloka and Suvrittatilaka. It is therefore proved beyond controversy, that Bhartrihari is the author of these Satakas.

(3) To give a precise answer to the third question is noway easy. But from a careful examination of the facts before us we shall try to fix the

* For further discussion on this point see Preface I. (C) and III.

the date of these Satakas as accurately as possible. Referring to the diagram put forward in part III of this preface we are able to assert that, many stanzas from these Satakas are found quoted in the works of (1) Abhinavagupta (ध्वन्यालोकटीका), (2) Keśawamiśra (अलङ्कारशेखरः), (3) Ruyyānaka (अलङ्कारसर्वस्वम्), (4) Vaidya, anātha (उदाहरणचंद्रिका), (5) Kśemendra (आचित्यविचारचर्चा, कविकण्ठाभरणम्, and सुवृत्त तिलकम्), (6) Mammata काव्यप्रकाशः), (7) Gōvinda (काव्यप्रदीपः), (8) Vāgbhatta (काव्यानुशासनम्), (9) Namisādhū (काव्यालङ्कारटीका), (10) Appayadixita (कुवलगनन्दः), (11) Dhananjaya (दशरूपावलोकः), (12) Anandavardhana (ध्वन्यालोकः), (13) Viśnu Śarma (पञ्चतन्त्रम्), (14) Ballāla (भोजप्रबन्धः), (15) Śiwarāma (रसरत्नहारः), (16) Śārngadhara (शाङ्गधरपद्मनिः), (17) Bhojarāja (सरस्वती-कण्ठाभरणम्), (18) Vallabhadeva (सुभाषितावलिः), (19) Jalhana सूक्तिमुक्तावलिः) and Nārāyana [हितोपदेशः]. Of these authors Abhinavagupta flourished towards the end of the tenth, Kśemendra and Nami Sādhū in the middle of the eleventh, Dhananjaya in the tenth, Anandavardhana in the ninth and Bhōjarāja in the eleventh centuries of the Christian era. Excepting Viśnu Śarmā and Nārāyana the remaining writers are comparatively later in age than these. Anandavardhana is the oldest among them and besides quoting stanza 6 (श्रु०) he even mentions भर्तृहरि by name.* This enables us to put the date of the Satakas before आनन्दवर्धन, the author of ध्वन्यालोक i. e. before the second half of the ninth century, because it is demonstrated that Anandavardhana flourished during the reign of King Avantivarma (855-884. A. D.). Of the two writers mentioned above Śiśnu Śarma is universally acknowledged to be much older than Nârâyana, and we shall therefore confine our remarks to him i. e. विष्णुशर्मा. As we find no less than 21 stanzas from these Śatakas in the Panchatantra, we cannot help concluding the date of the Śatakas to be older than that of the Panchatantra. Now if we succeed in fixing the date of the Panchatantra we shall at least be able to say something precisely about the chronology of the Śatakas.

The Panchatantra quotes copiously from the Mahābhārata, Kāmandakyanītisāra, Manusmṛiti. Rāmāyana and Chānakya. There are also two Ślokas in it (III. 27, and V. 14) which can respectively be traced to the Śiśupālābadha and Nāgānanda both of which are generally acknowledged to be later than the date usually assigned to the Panchatantra. Besides naming Manu, Vrihaspati, Vyāsa, Vālmīki, Bṛigu and Vātsyāyana, the Panchatantra also mentions Chānakya (I. p. 2, l. 1.) and Varāhamihira (I. p. 43, l. 12), writers whose dates are pretty accurately known to us.

Of the two Ślokas, one traceable to the Śiśupālābadha and the other to the Nāgānanda, we can easily dispose by thinking them either as later interpolations in the Panchatantra or as unconscious plagiarisms in the Śiśupālābadha and the Nāgānanda.

Chânakya as is well known was the friend, guide and political adviser of the adventurous Chandra gupta, the contemporary of Selukus, and so he must be placed somewhere about 325 B. C. * Consequently there is nothing strange in the allusion of Chânakya's Arthasâstra in the Panchatantra. † But Varâhamihira's date is unanimously accepted as the sixth century of the Christian era. Here then lies the great difficulty we have to confront about the settlement of Panchatantra's date. ‡ However taking it for a historical fact of reliable authenticity that Panchatantra is the original which was translated by "Buzerchemiher, the chief physician and afterwards Vizier of the great Anushirwân (as Sir William Jones remarked at a meeting of the Society of the Asiatic Researches on the 26th February 1876) we cannot help removing the date of the Panchatantra to a time long before the reign of that illustrious monarch, and thinking the mention of Varâhamihira in it to be a mere interpolation by some later copyist of the work. Panchatantra's date is therefore to be placed somewhere between that of Chânakya and that of Anushirwân or roughly speaking between 325 B. C. and 530 A. C. But as we learn from the preface of its first foreign translation that the work was rendered into that language after its obtaining a worldwide reputation, we cannot be far from right to allow about three centuries' time for the spread of its fame in those old days (bearing it in mind that the Indian princes in whose court the Panchatantra had secured for itself a very exalted position of rank and honour, took the greatest possible care to conceal this rare gem from the foreigners). This will further push on the date of Panchatantra's composition to somewhere about the second century of the Christian era.

* See Hunter's Brief History of the Indian People pp 76 and 77.

† "ततो धर्मशास्त्राणि मन्वादी न्ययशास्त्राणि चाजक्यादीनि" (पञ्चतन्त्रम् । कथंमुक्तम्).

‡ According to the authority of the learned editors of the काव्यमाला Panchatantra cannot be older than 750 A. D., because it quotes the Sloka पर्यङ्कुचास्तरणं &c. (Panchatantra I. 174.) from the Kuttinimata of Danodara Gupta, the prime minister of King Jayâpida (755-786 A. D.). See footnote at p. 111 of काव्यमाला मुद्रक No. 3.

As we find the 13th verse of the Panchatantra, book II, expressly assigned to Vikramâditya (विक्रमादित्य)—whom tradition makes younger brother of Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि)—in the Sârngadharapaddhati of Sârngadhara, at No. 277, and the Subhasitavâli of Vallabhadeva, at No. 507, and as there are no less than twenty-one stanzas from the Satakas to be found in the Panchatantra, we can fairly infer that the author of the Satakas lived a century or two earlier than Viṣṇu Sarmâ the author of the Panchatantra. This will go to prove the truth of the traditional history of Bhartrihari as given in the beginning of our preface.

(4) Three works are attributed to Bhartrihari. Of these we take the Satakas first of which we have acknowledged him to be the undisputed author.

The second work generally ascribed to him is the वाक्यपदीय. But to my mind the identity rests merely on name. Nothing about the parentage or literary work of Bhartrihari is told either in the वाक्यपदीय or the Satakas. So we are not authorized by facts to think Bhartrihari to be the author of the वाक्यपदीय. But the authority of tradition here countenances the identity of हरि of the वाक्यपदीय and Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) of the Satakas and we may do well to bow submissively to it until we are able to set it aside by satisfactory evidence of facts and figures.

The third work which tradition assigns to Bhartrihari is the भट्टिकाव्य.

But it has been already proved above in connection with the first and second parts of our Preface that the author of भट्टिकाव्य is a distinct personage from Bhartrihari. Bhattikavyam is proved to have been composed in the 6th or 7th century A. D. (See Weber's Sanskrit Literature p. 196 note).

(5)—There is no internal evidence to prove that Bhartrihari was himself a king and a brother of Vikramāditya. We have no authentic record about Vikramāditya, the founder of the Samvat Era, being the younger brother of Bhartrihari. Bhartrihari himself does not say anything about it. The tradition is not corroborated by any reliable external evidence of unquestionable authority. Of course we learn from the Satakas that, if not himself a king, Bhartrihari is quite at home and well conversant with courtlife. Bhartrihari is no doubt supposed to be as King in the भर्तृहरिनिर्वेदनाटक. The several street plays (ख्यल) on भर्तृहरि and गोपीचन्द also speak of Bhartrihari as Maternal uncle to गोपीचन्द and brother to विक्रमादित्य and मैनावति mother of Gopichanda.

From what has been said above we may take it as pretty certain that Bhartrihari is the author of the Satakas and that his precise date, though involved in mystery, is believed to be about 50 or 60 A. D. From a careful study of the Satakas we can also infer that he is a poet of no ordinary stamp, that he is quite at home in the delineation of Niti, Śringāra and Vairāgya and therefore one who must have actually tasted the fruits of all three, and that from his frequent reference to kings, kings' surroundings and kingly enjoyments, he must have been, if not a king himself, one thoroughly conversant with a king's state and life.

I cannot, before concluding this part of my Preface, help adducing some plea for the acceptance of Bhartrihari's tradition. When real authority is wanting, a people may justly be pardoned for accepting a tradition which has long been handed down from generation to generation, spreading over many centuries say 18 or 19, and which has not been thoroughly destroyed by the canons of Western criticism. Putting aside the inconclusive theories of many a learned scholars who have written on or of Bhartrihari, we may, therefore, be justified in heading the Preface with the traditional history of Bhartrihari, adhering, though not quite wholly and without reserve, to what is preserved in men's minds about the writer of these Satakas on Niti, Śringāra and Vairāgya.

V. PLACES OF INTEREST RELATING TO BHARTRIHARI.

Such places are numerous and spread all over India. We shall, however, confine ourselves to the description of those we have seen ourselves or read about in any reliable work.

(1). "Bhartrihari Gupha." A cave at Ujjein having within its centre a small altar at which Bhartrihari is said to have made his daily offerings, lighted his sacrificial fire and kindled his Dhoom. It is also told that a subterranean passage which formerly connected this cave with Benares is now blocked up.*

(2). "Bhartrihari's Gupha at Mount Abu."

On Mount Abu there are two caves pointed out as Bhartrihari's. One is by the old footpath to Basishthâshrama of Gaumukha which passes close to the Railway School leaving it on the left. A stream of water runs down the small rock in the rains. One of the apertures in the recess of the cave is supposed to be subterraneously running as far as Kâshi. It is all dark within and nothing can however be positively ascertained about the subterraneous passage. But here I would beg permission to remark that such legends are quite common with many a cave of renowned sages and Yogis throughout the land.

The other cave which is also spoken of as Bhartrihari's is on a hill on the left side of the Achaleswar Mandir (अचलेश्वर मंदिर) at A:halgarh. It is something like a proper Ashrama with one or two ragged kuchha sheds to give shelter to the resident Jogis who live there. These men always keep a smoking fire or Daconi (धुनी) continually burning in one place which is said to be the case from the time of Bhartrihari downwards. They wear red or reddish (रेखा) clothes and keep no wives and profess themselves to be the followers of the royal ascetic Bhartrihari.

(3). "Raja Bhartriharika Mahal." It is situated to the North of Schwan, a town on the right bank of the Indus and belonging to Hyderabad (Sind). The palace of Bhartrihari, as it is called up to date, is still to be seen in the centre of a very ancient and extensive fortress where Bhartrihari is said to have reigned when he was driven from Ujjain by his younger brother Vikramāditya. *

(4). "Bhartrihari's Man'ir". A temple to the south of Schwan which is held sacred both by the Hindus and Mohammedans. †

(5). "Bhartewar." A town belonging to the Chief of Kânorh, one of the sixteen great Barons of Meywar. It boasts of a high antiquity, and Bhartrihari the elder brother of Vikramāditya is said to be its reputed founder. ‡

(6). "Bhartrihari's Samadhusthânas." They are found in many places, but we shall enumerate those only to which we have been eyewitness.

(a)—There is a small village in the midst of a group of hills to the west of Ulwar (Rajputana), known by the name of Siriskâ. Within a quarter of a mile from that place is situated Bhartṛihari's Samâdhis thâna. Surrounded by dense forest the place abounds with wild beasts. A small rill flows through it during the rains and winter. There we find seven small domes or cupolâs nearly a yard in height and a yard in diameter. The concave of these domes, which are situated not far from one another, is all hollow. At the time I saw the place, six of the domes were closed on all sides without any opening while the seventh had a small door having an Akhanda Drépaka (अखण्डदीपक) or a small lamp continuously burning within it. There were also some sindoore tridents marked on both sides of the door. On enquiry I was told by the resident Jogis that Bhartṛihari has already taken his Samâdhi in six of these cupolâs, whereas the seventh containing the lamp represents Bhartṛihari's Jyoti ज्योति, where he is to come one day and take his seventh Samâdhi as before. The mouth of this cupolâ will also be closed at that time and an eighth will be raised to represent his Jyoti. This will also be closed in time and a ninth and last will again spring up to be similarly closed. Now we speak of him as "राजा भर्तृरीकी जय" or "Victory to Raja Bhartṛihari", but on his completing the ninth Samâdhi, he will be included among the 'नवनाथ' or nine 'Nâthas,' and then we shall speak of him as 'भर्तृरीनाथकी जय' 'Victory to Lord Bhartṛihari'. It was also told by the Jogi that there is no specified time for Bhartrihari's Samâdhi-taking. He comes here when he likes incognito, but when he takes the Samâdhi, Bhartrihari reveals himself in his true garb.

Needless to add that 'Samâdhi-taking' is here used in the sense of burying oneself alive. When a yogi takes Samâdhi, he is generally buried underground and a dome is raised on the spot to mark the event, but it is not unusual that he is again seen on the earth through his mystic powers of Yoga.

(b).—Another Samâdhisthâna of Bhartrihari is still pointed out at Châksu in Jeypore some 25 miles south of the Capital. Besides a cave and a yogi's shed and a Mamuli account of Bhartrihari's Samâdhi-taking at the place, there is nothing particular about it.

Apropos, I may also state that there exists a sect of Yogis who hold Bhartrihari in very high esteem and call themselves as 'भक्तरी' or the followers of Raja Bhartrihari. I hear that annual fairs in honor of the royal ascetic Bhartrihari are held at many places in India and they are frequented by numerous crowds of men and women of all castes and creeds. Bhartrihari is said to be immortal and believed now and then to appear to those pious Yogis who have renounced the world in right earnest.

Perhaps it will not be out of place to tell something about Gorakshanath (गोरक्षनाथ), the spiritual Guru of Bhartrihari. He is acknowledged to be one of the नवनाथ 'Nine Nathas' or nine great Yogis who are masters of the Yogaśâstra and who can reveal its wondrous secrets to whomsoever they please. * Some strange books, like the 'गोरक्षपद्धति' are attributed to Gorakshanâth. The Great Yogi is immortalized by the Gurkhas who hold him in great respect and reverence. The town of Gorakhpore some 55 miles west of Khatmandu (Nepal) is also called after the name of the reverend Yogi. In this town there is a cave known as Gorakhnatha's in which the great ascetic is said to have attained salvation.

VI. A PLEA FOR THE PRESENT EDITION.

It was in June 1893, that a friend of mine who had come up Mount Abu on some business and put up with me in the Jeypore House, thus remarked to me in a friendly chat we were enjoying together in the cool evening: "I see that you are very light of work. Please not to while away your time in idle pursuits and useless reading, but write out something which may do good to all of us." I could not deny the comparative ease of my position, and the earnestness with which the remark was made, led me to beg his excuse for my inability to put my hands to any serious useful composition. But my esteemed friend was not a man to be easily put aside and he pressed me to give him a pledge of acting up to his counsel which was reluctantly accorded, but without the least idea of ever fulfilling the same. To render the "Three Centuries of Bhartrihari" into English was his suggestion, and I gladly took the hint. Though I had not, as already noted, the least idea of keeping my word, still the auspicious moment in which the pledge was given led me on to set about the work in real earnest. The greater was my advance in the self-imposed task, the more hopeful became the prospect. At last the translation was finished. I wrote to the energetic Secretary of the Bombay Theosophical Society for its publication, who undertook to do it on condition of the manuscript being approved by his European brothers. Consequently, the translation of the Vairâgya Sataka was sent him about the month of November. But the manuscript was kindly returned by him after a few days together with a printed pamphlet entitled the 'Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari' and a paper bearing the autograph note of Col., Olcott to whom the manuscript and pamphlet were submitted for inspection. On reading the paper I found that the learned President of the Theosophical Society had remarked that both these needed corrections of idiom, the Pamphlet very much, the manuscript very little, and that he had no time to take it up for the present. Instead of being dejected by these remarks, I was very much gratified to see my first attempt being very near the point of being approved by the redoubtable head of the Theosophical Society. Besides, a close comparison of my translation with the Pamphlet soon dispelled my fears and filled my heart with great delight. By the way, I may here state that up to that date I had never dreamt of any existing English Translation of Bhartrihari. From that time downwards I gave myself heart and soul to bring my translation to the necessary perfection by availing myself of the many books on and relating to Bhartrihari. It may also be stated that this translation was submitted for his perusal to Col. G. H. Trevor C. S. I., the then enlightened Agent to the Governor General for the States of Rajputana, in the beginning of March 1895. After going through a considerable portion of the Nīṭi-sataka he returned it with thanks and evinced his full sympathy and approbation of the undertaking.

H. H, the Maharajadhiraj Sawai Pratap Singhji's translation is in Hindi Poetry: Dohās, Sorathās and Chhappayās. It consists of three chapters on Nīṭi, Śringāra and Vanāgya and is very terse and pithy and hence difficult to grasp for an ordinary reader.

The Hindi prose Translation of the Satakas by Pandit Rishabha Dutt Śāstri of Jodhpore is neither correct nor good.

I have, therefore, thought it advisable to give here a correct translation in Hindi prose of the day which will be found quite easy, clear and idiomatic.

As for English Translations of the work I have before me the following :—

(I) The Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari : anonymous.

(II) The Two Centuries of Bhartrihari: Prof Tawney.

(III) Bhartrihari's Nīṭisataka and Vairāgya Sataka translated into English by Mr. Durgā Prasād of Lahore.

I. After the remarks of Col. Olcott it is needless to dwell more upon the merits of the first. It contains only the two Satakas of Niti and Vairâgya.

II. Prof. Tawney's is no doubt a very splendid and elegant translation. But as it is in verse, it is either more or less than the original. Moreover there are to be found only the Niti and Vairâgya Satakas and the Śringâra chapter is quite left out in the edition.

III. It (Mr. Durgâ Prasâd's translation) is of course better than the Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartihari, but it is not quite up to the point. It this, too, the Śringâra Sataka is also wanting.

From these remarks it will not be quite difficult to see that the present edition is to fill up a necessary gap regarding the Satakas of Bhartihari. Besides a large number of copious notes (both critical and explanatory) at the end of the volume, the original Sanskrit Text being immediately followed by Hindi and English translations, and variety of citations or parallel passages from Sanskrit and English authors, constitute a novel feature of the present edition. An English translation of the Śringâra Sataka is, I think, here presented for the first time to the public. There being really nothing which can properly be called obscene and immoral, I do not think that any apology is needed for the insertion of the Śringâra Sataka. On the contrary, the stanzas are to be found comparatively quite decent and innocent by the side of a number of novels and amorous poems in English. Moreover, if rightly understood, almost all the strophes of the Śringâra Śataka are intentionally composed to divert our attention from the baneful influence of women in particular and worldly enjoyments in general. So, if we are to leave out the noble thoughts of the Śringâra Śataka, we commit a great mistake in bringing out a very poor picture of the author's exalted and praiseworthy aim in the composition of this work.

In numbering the stanzas of the Nīti and Vairāgya Śatakas, I have generally followed the Nirmaya Śāgara (Bombay) Edition of Bhartrihari's Śatakatrāyam, but in that of the Śringâra Śataka the plan adopted is mostly consistent with the Gyāna Śāgara Press Edition of Bhartrihari's Śatakatrāyam.

As for the Table of Contents I have stuck to no particular copy or copies of the work but keeping in view almost all of them, I have independently worked out quite a new arrangement of the subjects from a careful study of the text. To make the edition as useful as possible, I have also appended to it an alphabetical list of all the ślōkas of these Śatakas. A full list of works and authors referred to in the compilation of this book is also to be found in the present volume.

In the end I may remark, with Prof. Tawney that "translations are seldom popular either in prose or verse unless they depart widely from the spirit of the original. But a certain measure of fidelity to the original, even at the risk of making oneself ridiculous is better than the studied dishonesty which characterises so many translations of oriental poets."

On the whole it can be safely said that if perused with care and attention the book will no doubt be found to be a very interesting and istructive reading. However, it being only the first juvenile attempt in the field of literary composition, the present volume cannot naturally be expected to be entirely free from all sorts of faults and drawbacks, but the reception accorded to it by the reading public and the impartial judgment passed on its merits and demerits by learned critics will ultimately decide whether the couple of years of hard labour and persevering industry spent in bringing it out have been well spent or not, and whether any other essay can again be usefully and successfully made in this direction by its amateur editor.

Before concluding I may be permitted to pay my cordial and grateful thanks to those of my friends who have helped me any way by their valuable suggestions and appropriate encouragements not to give up the undertaking, nor to do it half heartedly and imperfectly but to carry it through to the best of my ability and power.

ONE HUNDRED STANZAS ON NÎTI.

Bow to the calm and self-luminous Being whose image is entirely free from (or undefined by) the limits of Space, Time, &c., and is, therefore, Infinite; and whose existence is only experienced by one's own conscience or whose sole (principal) essence is self-knowledge!

This stanza which is quoted under Bhartrihari (भरतृहरी) in Ballabhadeva's Subhāṣitāvalī (सुभाषितमाला) at No. 3. (Bombay Sanskrit Series XXXI.) also forms the opening Śloka of the Vasishthasāra (वासिष्ठसार).

यां चिन्तयामि सततं मयि सा विरक्ता
 साऽप्यन्यमिच्छति जनं स जनोऽन्यसक्तः ।
 अस्मत्कृते च परितुष्यति काचिदन्या
 धितां च तं च मदनं च इमां च मां च ॥२॥

मैं जिसका निरन्तर चिन्तन करता हूँ वह मुझको नहीं चाहती किन्तु वह किसी अन्यपुरुषसे प्यार करती है; और खेदका विषय है कि वह पुरुष किसी दूसरीही स्त्रीपर आसक्त हो रहा है। इसही तरह कोई ऐसी स्त्रीभी विद्यमान है जो हमसे बहुतही प्रसन्न है। ऐसी दशामें इस स्त्रीको, प्यारीके जारपुरुषको, प्यारीको, मुझको और कामदेवको अत्यन्त धिक्कार है ॥ २ ॥

She of whom I always think is indifferent to me, but, on the contrary, she likes another man, who, in his turn, is attached to a different woman. Again, there is some one else who takes much delight in me. With these facts before us, we cannot help calling shame and censure upon her (the woman who loves me), him (my love's paramour), my love, myself, and Cupid (the real author of all these evils).

Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) is here said to allude to the infidelity of his wife. See Note to this stanza.

This Sloka (श्लोक) is quoted anonymously by Sinhadevamani in his commentary on Vāgbhattatīlankāra (वाग्भट्टालंकार).

To manage (conciliate) an ignorant person is quite easy, and easier still is the propitiation of the learned; but to please the conceited fellow whose head is turned by his little learning is surely an impossible task even for Brahmā, the Creator.

You may even dare take out a precious gem from the pointed jaws of a dreadful alligator, or swim over the vast ocean whose waters are all disturbed by a series of furious rolling waves, or wear an enraged (offended) serpent upon your head, as if it were a flowery wreath; but, you should never undertake the fruitless task of conciliating the mind of a stupid fellow who is determined to hold obstinately to his own conviction whether right or wrong.

You may even succeed, by persistent endeavours, to obtain oil by compressing the particles of sand, or to find out water to drink in the midst of a mirage; or sometimes in your wanderings you may even come upon the horns of a hare; but the propitiation of the impenetrable heart of a perverse fool is undoubtedly a useless undertaking for all your varied efforts.

विभूषणं मौनमपण्डितानाम् ॥७॥

विधाताने मूर्खोंकी मूर्खता छुपानेका अर्थ मौन धारण करनेका एक बहुत उत्तम उपाय निर्माण किया है और वह उपायभी उसने मूर्खोंके स्वाधीनही रखदिया है । यह मौन केवल मूर्खताका आच्छादन करनेवालाही नहीं है किन्तु पंडितोंकी सभामें बैठे हुए मूर्खोंका आभूषणभी है ॥ ७ ॥

The best means (silence) by which ignorance can be concealed from the sight of others has been graciously left by God in the personal control of man who can use it as he pleases. Silence is an ornament of the illiterate, especially in the assembly of learned (all-knowing) people.

At page 2 of Indian Antiquary, Vol. IV. Prof. Tawney quotes a Greek epigram as a parallel to this stanza.

यदाऽकिञ्चिज्ज्ञोऽहं द्विप इव मदान्धः समभवं
 तदा सर्वज्ञोऽस्मीत्यभवदवलितं मम मनः ।
 यदा किञ्चित्किञ्चिद्बुधजनसकाशादवगतं

जब मैं बिलकुलही अज्ञ अर्थात् अनसमझ था तब मदोन्मत्त-हस्तीके समान अभिमानमें अंध होकर अपने को सर्वज्ञ समझा
 करताथा परंतु अब पंडितोंकी संगतिसे थोड़ेसे ज्ञानके होतेही वह
 सब उन्माद ज्वरवेगकी तरह मेरे शरीरसे इतना जाता रहाहै कि मैं अपने आपको मूर्ख जानने लगगयाहूं ॥ ८ ॥

When I knew nothing I behaved like a furious elephant in ruts, considering myself an omniscient being; but now when I have come to learn something from the wise I have discovered my own ignorance, and having shaken off the fever of vain conceit I acknowledge myself to be a blockhead.

 dharapaddhati* (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति) at No. 4177.

The reading यदा ऽकिञ्चिज्ज्ञोऽहं is far better than यदाकिञ्चिज्ज्ञोऽहं, and hence it has been adopted here in preference to the latter.

Just as a dog is not ashamed of being seen by Indra, the lord of gods, when it is bent on joyfully eating a putrid and fleshless piece of human bone full of worms and saliva, and devoid of all juice and taste, so a mean fellow is never ashamed of accepting another's worthless favour, charity, or munificence.

PURPORT.

No pursuit is ever considered as dishonest and derogatory by the mean.

This stanza is same as stanza 8 in Śāntisūta Part II.
(शान्तिशतकं द्वितीयपरिच्छेदः).

अभ्यन्त विरस though not exactly equivalent to निरुपमरसं of the text gives approximately the same idea.

विष्णुभगवान्के चरणारविंदोंसे निकलनेवाली गंगा प्रथमतो स्वर्गसे शिवजीके मस्तकपर, और वहांसे पर्वतपर, और ऊंचे गिरिशिखरसे पृथ्वीतलपर, और फिर घरातलपर बहती हुई अन्तमें समुद्रमें जा गिरती है । जैसे ऊंचे पदको छोड़नेपर वारंवार अधः पतन होते होते गंगाके समान सुरनदीभी अत्यंत नीचेस्थानमें आजाती है वैसेही ज्ञानमार्गसे भ्रष्ट हुए मनुष्यभी शतशः प्रकारकी विपत्ति झेलते रहते हैं ॥ १० ॥

Those who have unfortunately lost the power of discerning right from wrong are sure to suffer a thousand falls like those of the Ganges that first falls from the heights of heaven upon the head of Shiva, and thence upon the lofty summits of the Himâlaya, from which it again flows down to the plains below, and then empties its waters into the sea, being thus obliged to fall to the lowest level by gradual descent.

For the varied courses of the heavenly river—the Ganges—see our Notes on this stanza. One of the Sanskrit names of the Ganges (गंगा) is Tripathagā (त्रिपथगा) which means a river of three different paths, or courses. . . .

जैसे हम जलके द्वारा अग्निको शमन करसकते हैं, छत्रसे सूर्यके तेजको रोक सकते हैं, मत्तगजराजको तीक्ष्णअङ्कुशसे वश करसकते हैं, गौगर्दभादि पशुओंको लकड़ीकी ताड़नासे भयभीत करसकते हैं, अनेक प्रकारके रोगोंको औषधियोंसे शान्त करसकते हैं, और विषका प्रभाव नानाविधमंत्रादिकोंसे दूरकरसकते हैं । इसही भांति अन्यान्य सब उपद्रवोंकीभी यथोचित औषधियां शास्त्रमें विद्यमान हैं परंतु मूर्खमनुष्यका मूर्खत्व नष्ट करनेके निमित्त कहींपरभी कोई औषधि दृष्टिगोचर नहीं होती ॥ ११ ॥

We can keep off fire by water; the hot sun by an umbrella, a wild elephant in ruts by a sharpedged hook, the unruly cattle by the goading stick, a disease by collecting medicines, and the evil effects of a poison by the use of various charms (lit. Mantras). Every possible evil in the world has its appropriate remedy prescribed by the Sāstras, but there is no effective cure of a blockhead 'throughout the vast range of the Scriptures.

This stanza is same as stanza 5 in the Pancharatna (पंचरत्न). It is also quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) (No. 2943. B. S. S. No. XXXI.). The verse also occurs in the Sūktāvalī (सूक्तावलि) १७। Cf.—

जिस मनुष्यको साहित्य और संगीतशास्त्रका कुछभी ज्ञान नहींहै वह निस्संदेह पुच्छ और शृंगरहित पशु है । तृणादि भक्षण- करनेके बिना उसका जीवित रहनाभी पशुओंका सौभाग्य सूचित करताहै; क्योंकि यदि उसका जीवनभी घासपरही निर्भर होता तो पशुओंको अपनी उदरपूरणा करनेमें बहुतही कठिनाता होजाती॥ १२॥

One who is ignorant of literature and music is undoubtedly a tailless and hornless beast; and the fact of his being accustomed to live without grass affords a fortunate advantage to cattle that are thus secured to make a free use of their natural food.

The latter half of this Śloka—one of the most important sayings of Bhartrihari—is often misinterpreted by commentators and translators. It is easy to see how much force it loses, and how non-sensical it becomes by the interpretation which renders it thus: Lower animals can subsist without grazing on grass, and so they too are even better off than men."

येषां न विद्या न तपो न दानं
ज्ञानं न शीलं न गुणो न धर्मः ।
ते मर्त्यलोके भुवि भारभूता
मनुष्यरूपेण मृगाश्चरन्ति ॥ १३ ॥

जिन मनुष्योंने न तो विद्याध्ययनही कियाहै, न तपश्चरणही कियाहै, न दानही दिया है, न ज्ञानही संपादन किया है, न सुशीलहीका आचरण कियाहै, न गुणोपार्जनही किया है और न धर्मानुष्ठानही कियाहै, वह इस मर्त्यलोकमें केवल आकृतिमात्रसे मनुष्य कहलाते हैं; परंतु वास्तवमें वह साधारण मृगोंकी भांति पृथ्वीमाताके वृथाभाररूप हैं ॥ १३ ॥

Those who have neither learning, nor devotion, nor charity, nor spiritual knowledge, nor good conduct, nor morality, nor religious faith are nothing less than mere useless burdens to mother earth, wandering over this mortal world like the wild deer in a human form.

Prof. Tawney cites a striking parallel to this stanza from the Illiad. See Tawney's Two Centuries of Bhartrihari, p. 6.

The verse stands in the Suktāvali (सूक्तावलि १८).

The point of the stanza seems to be that a man to prove his superiority to animals must give himself to learning, devotion, &c., &c.

वरं पर्वतदुर्गेषु भ्रान्तं वनचरैः सह ।
न मूर्खजनसम्पर्कः सुरेन्द्रभवनेष्वपि ॥१४॥

व्याघ्रादि हिंसक जंतुओंके साथ दुर्गम पर्वत और विषम वना-
दिकमें भ्रमण करना तो फिरभी किसीप्रकार अच्छा है परंतु
मूर्खजनका मिलाप तो इंद्रभवनमें भी श्रेष्ठ नहीं होता ॥ १४ ॥

Roaming with wild beasts in dense forests and mountains is surely to be preferred to the company of a fool though it may take place within the palatial premises of the mighty Indra, the lord of gods.

It also stands in the Suktavali (सूक्तावलि १२०).

Cf.—“ न स्यात्तस्य न गन्तव्यं दुर्जेनेन समं क्वचिद् । ”

(हितोपदेश । ३ । २२).

In plain language the instruction conveyed by this stanza is that to live a poor and risky life is far better than to form an acquaintance of a fool. The temptation of a fool's friendship is invariably to be avoided at all costs and hazards.

The word पर्वतदुर्गेषु admits of two different interpretations:
(1) inaccessible mountains or (2) mountains and impassable lands, according to the two ways in which the word is compounded i. e.
either it is a वस्तुसम्यक् or द्रव्य compound respectively.

जिस राजाके राज्यमें शास्त्रानुसार शुद्ध सुंदर भाषण करनेवाले और वेदादि विद्याओंके पढानेवाले सुप्रसिद्ध कविजन निर्धन होकर निवास करते हैं उस राजाके मूर्ख होनेमें किसीप्रकारकाभी संशय नहीं, क्योंकि जैसे बहुमूल्य मणिका अल्पमूल्य अंकित करनेसे जौहरी ही कुपरीक्षक (या अनाड़ी) कहलाते हैं और मणिका वास्तवमें वही मूल्य बना रहता है वैसेही सत्कवियोंका निरादर करनेसेभी राजाहीकी मूर्खता प्रगट होती है, कवीश्वरोंका यथार्थमें कुछभी नहीं घटता क्यों कि वह तो धनादि न होनेपरभी प्रभावशाली हैं ॥ १५ ॥

The chief in whose territory the far-famed poets commanding a sweet and melodious speech saturated with deep learning of the shâstrâs, as well as a number of pupils of great erudition, cannot earn a substantial livelihood, and hence drag on a poor miserable life is indeed to be stamped a veritable fool. The poets though suffering from penury are still to be thought as men of influence and power in the world; for, it is the sad mistake of the unfortunate jewellers who are misled to undervalue the precious gems which do not thereby lose a bit of their real worth.

Cf.—“ Ability, and not riches, constitute worth.” (Saadi).

 क्योंकि इनकी बराबरी करनेमें कोईभी समर्थ नहीं होसकता ॥ १६ ॥

Give up your vain pride, oh kings, before the learned and treat them fairly as your equals or even superiors; for, who can ever compete with those whose hidden wealth of knowledge is (1) beyond the power of thieves to steal, (2) always a source of indescrible happiness to them, (3) so strange that instead of being lessened by distribution among its seekers
 (i. e. the students) it, on the contrary, ever grows more and more, and (4) is never subject to ruin not even at the end of Kalpa i. e. on the day of universal destruction.

You should not show the least dishonour to those learned men who have obtained true spiritual knowledge; for, your worthless wealth is quite helpless to make them surrender to your power: the furious elephants whose temples have newly been marked with the black lines of rut can never be bound by the delicate tendrils of a lotus stem.

If the Creator be ever displeased with the swan, He can of course deprive the wise bird of its pleasant luxury of living in the midst of a cluster of fair lotuses; but however wroth He may be He can never be successful to wrest from the sagacious fowl the enviable instinct of separating milk from water, with which it is openly credited all over the world.

PURPORT. No one can ever succeed to alter the natural propensities of the created nature.

The verse is quoted under मर्तृहारि in the शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति at No. 797. For the point of the stanza, cf.—

Properly speaking the person of man is neither adorned by armlets, nor by moonwhite necklaces, nor by bathing, nor by ointments (i. e. applying

The power of speech in a perfect and refined state is the only thing which can really add to the handsome-it are subject to decay whereas the gracefulness of speech lasts for ever.

Knowledge is, no doubt, an additional beauty of man. It is a very hidden treasure. Knowledge brings enjoyment, fame, and happiness. Knowledge is the teacher of teachers. Knowledge substitutes a relative in foreign travels. Knowledge is the supreme god. Kings reverently worship knowledge and not wealth. One devoid of knowledge is a brute.

bearance, anger, relatives, friends, evil persons, pro-

This stanza is same as stanza 4 in Pancharatna (पंचरत्न).

The above stanza furnishes us with a very striking instance of Bhartrihari's pithy and epigrammatic style. Every sentence is so laconic that it is sometimes not easy to know the sense at first sight

लोकाचारकी मर्यादा और स्थिति उनही कलाकुशल नररत्नोंपर निर्भर है कि जो स्वजनके साथ उदारता, परजनमें दयाभाव, दुर्जनकेसाथ कुटिलता, सत्पुरुषसे प्रीति, राजसभामें नीति (अथवा राजाके आगे विनय), विद्वान्के आगे नम्रता, शत्रुकेसाथ पराक्रम गुरुजनके आगे सहनशीलता, और स्त्रीसमाजमें धूर्ततादि उत्तमोत्तम गुणोंका समयानुसार वर्ताव करसकतेहैं ॥ २२ ॥

Those persons who are well versed in showing politeness towards their relations, compassion towards strangers, wickedness towards the bad, love for the good, obedience to kings, humility before the learned, valour against enemies, patient hearing and obedience to their elders, and shrewdness among women are no doubt the real cardinal points (main stops) on which the existence of the world mainly depends.

PURPORT. The world cannot go on as it does without the presence of such persons of versatile capabilities.

नास्ति येषां यशःकाये जरामरणजं भयम् ॥२४॥

सरस कविताके कहनेवाले कवीश्वर संसारमें सर्वोत्कृष्ट रहते हैं क्योंकि इनका सुयशमय शरीर जरामरणादि दुःखसे बिलकुल स्वतंत्र और निर्भय है ॥ २४ ॥

यहांपर “रससिद्धाः” का प्रयोग दोअर्थोंमें किया गया है । (१) एक तो शृंगारादि नवरसोंमें प्रवीण और (२) दूसरे पारदादि सिद्ध-रसोंके सेवन करनेवाले ॥

The great poets who are perfect masters of the Rasas (i. e. the poetical styles) are indeed worthy of universal respect and glory; because the wonderfully composed state of their bodies being made up of pure immortal fame of quite free from the fearful influences of age and death.

सदाचारी पुत्र, सती स्त्री, प्रसादोन्मुख (प्रसन्नचित्त और हितैषी) स्वामी, वात्सल्यादिगुणयुक्त मित्रमंडल, निष्कपट सेवक, क्लेशरहित मन, सुन्दर आकार, स्थिर लक्ष्मी, और विद्यासे सुशो-

A son with good moral conduct, a chaste wife, a loving master, an affectionate friend, honest relatives, a mind free from all anxieties and cares, a handsome appearance, lasting (steady) prosperity, and an intel-

प्राणीमात्रकी हिंसा करनेसे निवृत्त रहना, दूसरोंका धन हरण करनेकी इच्छा न रखना, सत्य भाषण करना, समयानुसार श्रद्धा-पूर्वक दान देना, पराई स्त्रीकी चर्चा करने और सुननेसे दूर रहना, तृष्णारूपी नदीके प्रवाहको रोकना, गुरुजनोंके आगे विनय धारण करना, और सब जीवों पर दया करना सर्व साधारणके लिए सर्वशास्त्रसंमत कल्याणका मार्ग है ॥ २६ ॥

To avoid giving injury to living beings, to keep aloof from stealing the wealth of others, to tell the truth, to exercise due charity in time, to keep quiet on the gossips of others' wives, to confine the desire of gain within proper limits, to behave with meekness before the elders, and to show mercy and kindness to all creatures are unanimously enjoined by the Scriptures to be the one unerring road leading to all sorts of good and happiness.

संसारमें (१) नीच, (२) मध्यम और (३) उत्तम ये तीन प्रकारके मनुष्य होते हैं, जिनमेंसे (१) नीच मनुष्य तो आगन्तुक विघ्नोंके भयमात्रसे किसी कार्यका प्रारम्भही नहीं करते, और (२) मध्यम प्रकारके मनुष्य यद्यपि कामका समारम्भ तो करदेते हैं, किन्तु विक्षेप होनेसे बीचहीमें अधूरा छोड़ देते हैं, परन्तु (३) उत्तम मनुष्य ऐसे धैर्यवान् होते हैं कि बारंबार विघ्न सहन करने परभी अपने हाथमें लिए हुए कामको सम्पूर्ण किये विना कदापि नहीं छोड़ते ॥ २७ ॥

Bad men do not even begin a thing through fear of future obstacles; the mediocre after commencing it, give it up when they are confronted with real present evils; but good men never leave unfinished what they have once begun, notwithstanding the fact of their being repeatedly baffled and opposed.

It is quite natural with good people to live upon their just earnings, never to do a sinful act not even at the time when there is a probability of losing their own lives, never to ask anything either from the evil or even from a poor friend short of money, to behave boldly and honourably in days of adversity, and always to follow the footsteps of the wise. No one has ever dictated this hard Asidhārā vow to the good, but its keeping is quite natural to them.

षितावली). (No. 280. B. S. S. No. XXXI.).

Asidhārā (असिधारा) literally means 'edge of a sword.' For further explanation see our Note.

इच्छा करता रहता है वह चाहे कितनाही क्षुधातुर, जरावस्थासे
दुबल, बलहीन, अत्यन्त दुःखी और तेजहीन क्यों न होजाय, परन्तु
प्राणसंकट उपस्थित होने पर भी सूखाघास खाने को कदापि उद्यत

भावार्थ ।

Can the lion, the foremost of the self-respecting and noble beings, who is always anxious to get a mouthful of the superb temples of wild elephants in ruts so much degrade himself as even to condescend to feed upon dry grass although he is lean and weak by hunger as well as by age, almost powerless, in a very painful condition, devoid of splendour and energy, and apt to lose his very life failing to get a morsel of food.

PURPORT. A man of self-reliance and respect can never degrade himself to do a mean and disgraceful act notwithstanding his too severely straitened circumstances.

नेको दौड़ता है । इससे प्रत्यक्ष है कि संकटमें पड़ेहुए प्राणियोंके कार्य भी उनके बल और सामर्थ्यके अनुसारही हुवा करते हैं ॥३०॥

The dog is easily satisfied by securing a small piece of fleshless bone superficially dirty on account of a little fat and muscles, though it is quite insufficient to appease its hunger; but the lion is sure to throw off the body of a jackal already lying in his arms, so that he may prey upon an elephant. Notwithstanding his straitened circumstances every one is anxious to do what is becoming to his rank and position in life.

This stanza is found in the ईशोपदेश (II 36), and the Panchatantra; and the author of Subhashitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) has also given it under the latter work, at No. 1025.

A dog is given to wag his tail, fall at the feet of his master, and lie down flat on the ground to show his mouth and stomach to the man who feeds him; but such is not the case with the noble elephant who looks with a calm and steady glance upon the face of his master, and then condescends to take his food after a series of soothing and flattering entreaties.

The stanza is also found in the Panchatantra (पंचतंत्र) and the Hitopadesa (हितोपदेश १.२।३७). It is quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitarālī (सुभाषिनावलि (No. 641.. B. S. S. No. XXXI.).

परिवर्तिनि संसारे मृतः को वा न जायते । स
जातो येन जातेन याति वंशः समुन्नतिम् ॥३२॥

इस भ्रमणशील अस्थिर संसारमें अगणित जीवोंका जन्म और मरण सदाकालही होता रहता है, परन्तु यथार्थमें जन्म लेना उसही मनुष्यका सफल है कि जिसके जन्म लेनेसे उसके वंशके गौरवकी वृद्धि हो ॥ ३२ ॥

Who is not born and dead on the face of this revolving planet? He alone is really said to be born by whose birth his family has risen to some great distinction.

This stanza which stands in the Panchatantra (पंचतन्त्रम् । १।१७) and the Hitopadeśa (हितोपदेशः । प्र० १३) is quoted anonymously in the Subhāṣitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) (No. 500. B. S. S. No. XXXI.).

(b) “ किं तेम जानु जातेम मानुर्वीवनहारिणा ।

The word परिवर्तिनि= is apt to change, inconstant, or ever-rolling.

व्यतीत करते हैं ॥ ३३ ॥

Like a bunch of flowers, there are only two alternatives or modes of existence open for noble souls : (1) either to be at the head of all men, or (2) to pine (fade) away in forest.

This stanza is quoted twice by Ballabhadeva in his Subhāshī-tāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 509 of which it is given anonymously, and at No. 201 it is put under the name of Ravigupta (रविगुप्त). In the Sārngadharapadāhātī (शार्ङ्गधरपदाति १२६४) it is ascribed to Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि). It also stands in the Hitopadeśa (हितोपदेशः १।१०१).

Cf.—(a) “कुसुमस्तवकचित्तानां द्वयमेव सुखावहम् ।

(b) “होत मनस्वी लोकमें, जनसमाज सिरताज ।

र्षावशेषाकृतिः ॥ ३४ ॥

यद्यपि सौर्यमंडलमें बृहस्पतिको आदि लेकर और भी बड़े बड़े पांच नक्षत्र विद्यमान हैं; तथापि असामान्य पराक्रममें अभिरुचि रखनेवाला दानवपति राहु इनके साथ अपना वैरभाव कदापि प्रगट नहीं करता, किन्तु अवसर आने पर प्रत्येक पर्व-
तिथिमें अर्थात् अमावास्या और पूर्णिमाके दिन दिवाकर (सूर्य) और निशानाथ (चंद्रमा) काही ग्रस करनेको उद्यत होता है ॥ ३४ ॥

Though there are some five or six well-known big planets like Jupiter, and others in the heavens, yet Ràhu, the headless demon, is never inclined to show the least cause of hatred to any of them; but being anxious to prove the superiority of his unusual valour he always tries to eat up or eclipse his real enemies the Sun (the lord of day) and the Moon (the beloved spouse of night).

PURPORT. The high-souled are never inclined to wreak their vengeance upon others but their real enemies whether big or small.

Cf.—“नैकमप्यरिमनन्तपक्षयोऽप्याहवेऽवगणयन्ति धीधनाः ।

सत्सु तारकगणेषु राहुणा ग्रस्यते किमु न तारकाग्रिपः ॥ ३२ ॥ ”

चौदह भुवनको शेष नाग अपने फणपर धारण करता है और
कच्छपराजने अपनी पृष्ठपर शेष नागको धारण कर रक्खा है;
परन्तु समुद्रे इस कच्छपराजको भी एक हलकेसे पदार्थकी तरह
अपने अंकपर ले रक्खा है । इससे स्पष्ट है कि महापुरुषोंके चरित्रका कोई पागवार नहीं होसकता ॥ ३५ ॥

Seshatnāga though he supports the entire universe upon the flat of surface of his thousand heads is always borne on back by the great tortoise; but he in his turn is easily sustained (as if it were the lightest and tiniest object in the world) on its lap by the storehouse of waters (i. e. ocean) Oh, how infinite is the magnanimous conduct of noble souls !

The stanza is also found in the Bhōjaprabandha (भोजप्रबन्ध).

Cf.—“ विष्णुर्बिभर्ति भगवानखिलां धरित्रीं तं पन्नगस्तमपि तस्मिन्नि- पयोधिः ।

कुम्भोद्भवस्तमपि वरखलु हेलयैव सख्यं न कश्चिदवधिर्भूता महिम्नः ॥ ” (सुभाषितावालिः । १९३).

Mark that the beauty of each succeeding line of the stanza overshadows that of its predecessor, reaching the culminating point in the last foot.

वरं पक्षच्छेदः समदमघवन्मुक्तकुलिशप्रहारै-

हिमालयके पुत्र मैनाकके लिए देवराज इंद्रके वज्रप्रहारोंसे निकलती हुई जाज्वल्यमान ज्वालमालाओंसे दुःखित अपने पिताको महासंकटमें छोड़कर प्राणरक्षाके निमित्त समुद्रमें जाकर पतन करनेकी अपेक्षा विपत्तिकालमें पिताके समीप रहकर निज पक्षोंका छेदन करानाही सर्वथा उचित था ॥ ३६ ॥

भावार्थ ।

पिताको कष्टावस्थामें छोड़कर निज प्राणरक्षाके निमित्त अन्य स्थानमें गमन करना मानी जनोंके लिए सर्वथा निंदनीय है.

For the son of the Himâlayâ when his father was subjected to the severities of Indra's anger, the cutting of his own sides (wings) by the heavy strokes of proud Indra's thunderbolt giving out fire at every attack would have been much preferable to the mean effort of saving his person by leaving alone his venerable father in the midst of the sad plight and hastening to drown himself into the waters of the deep ocean.

Cf.—(a) “ कौञ्चं विमुच्य पुत्रं च पितरं च हिमालयम् ।

(मुरारिकृतानर्धराघवे).

(b) “ स्वस्थानादपि विचलति मज्जाति जलधौ च नीचमपि भजते ।

यदचेतनोऽपि पादैः स्पृष्टः प्रज्वलति सवितु- रिनकान्तः । तत्तेजस्वी पुरुषः परकृतविकृतिं कथं सहते ॥ ३७ ॥

जब चेतनारहित सूर्यकांतमणि भी सूर्यकिरणोंका स्पर्श करतेही
प्रज्वलित होजाता है तो चैतन्ययुक्त तेजस्वी पुरुष दूसरोंका अनादर कैसे सहन करसकते हैं ॥ ३७ ॥

When it is possible even for a senseless and inanimate object like a sunstone to give out sparks of fire on its being touched by the rays (lit. feet) of the Sun, how can highsouled (irritable) persons put up with the insulting encroachments of others ?

Cf.—(a) “ रविमणिरपि निश्चेष्टः पादैस्निगमद्युतेर्भनाक् स्पृष्टः । ज्वलतितरामिति को वा मन्युं सोढुं क्षमो मानी ॥ ”

(सुभाषितावलिः).

(b) “ न तेजस्तेजस्वी प्रसृतमपरेषां प्रसहते

मयूखैरश्रान्नं तपति यदि देवो । दनकरः

किमाग्नेयपावा निष्कृत इव तेजांसि वमति ॥ ”

(उत्तररामचरिते).

The net point of the stanza seems to be this : a strong man of real worth cannot be expected to put up calmly with the insult of others.

सिंहः शिशुरपि निपतति मदमलिनकपोल-भित्तिषु गजेषु । प्रकृतिरियं सत्त्ववतां न खलु
वयस्तेजसो हेतुः ॥ ३८ ॥

सिंहका बच्चा छोटा होनेपर भी उत्तम गजराजके मदांकित गंडस्थलपर प्रहार करता है । इससे जानना चाहिए कि तेजस्वी पुरुषोंकी शूरवीरता स्वाभाविक है । सच तो यह है कि अवस्थाको निश्चयात्मकरूपसे तेजस्विताका हेतु कदापि नहीं कहसकते ॥ ३८ ॥

The whelp of a lion though quite young is sure to fall upon a herd of ferocious elephants whose temples are soiled with secretious rut. Such action is quite natural with noble natures. That valour (तेज) is entirely independent of age is beyond controversy.

यदि जाति पांति रसातलमें चलीजाय, नानाभांतिके गुणसमूह
उससे भी आगे प्रस्थान करजावें, सुशीलता पर्वतशिखरसे गिर-
जाय, उच्चकुल भी अग्निसे भलेही जल जाय, और इस वैरि
शूरवीरतापर भी शीघ्रही वज्रपात होजाय, तो कुछ चिंता नहीं,
परंतु द्रव्यसंचयमें किसी प्रकारकी बाधा नहीं होनी चाहिए,
क्योंकि एक द्रव्यकं न होनेसे सारे गुणगण तृणकणके समान
होजाते हैं ॥३९॥

Let caste go down to the down-most depth of the nether world, and deeper still may sink the good qualities belonging to us; let morality be hurled down from a mountain, and respectability of birth be consumed into flames; let the thunderbolt of heaven soon fall upon the enemical physical valour; but let the gracious God leave us alone with our money by the single exception of which all these possessions are as worthless as straw.

Ballabhadra in his Subhashitāvali (सुभाषितावलि) quotes it at रग्रतिहता वचनं तदेव । अर्थोष्मणा विरहितः

पुरुषः स एव त्वन्यः क्षणेन भवतीति विचित्र-मेतत् ॥४०॥

यद्यपि ये सब इंद्रिय ज्योंकी त्यों बनी रहती हैं और कर्म, बुद्धि और वचनशक्ति भी मनुष्यकी वैसीकी वैसी ही विद्यमान रहती है, परंतु एक द्रव्यके नष्ट होजानेसे मनुष्य क्षणभरमें कुछ औरका औरही होजाता है यह निस्संदेह बहुतही विचित्र है ॥४०॥

It is really wonderful that a man deprived of wealth (lit. the warmth of wealth) instantly becomes quite a different and changed being, notwithstanding his being still the master of his former senses, actions, and the same bright intellect and power of speech !

It needs no explanation to prove that money is something like life to man. Instances are not wanting in the world to show that a rich man losing riches almost loses his life.—Ed.

जिस मनुष्यके पास द्रव्य है वह निश्चय करके कुलीन, पंडित, शास्त्रवेत्ता, गुणज्ञ, वक्ता और सुंदर कहा जाता है; इससे प्रत्यक्ष है कि सारे गुण द्रव्यहीके आश्रित हैं ॥ ४१ ॥

One who is wealthy is also considered as (1) well born, (2) learned, (3) a man of information, (4) a good

The gem when polished by a whetstone, the winner of a battle when wounded by a sword, the elephant when emaciated with the flow of rut, the wintry rivers whose banks (beds) are almost dry, crescent moon when rising anew with its waned splendour, charming young ladies when exhausted by amorous sports, and noble souls when they are reduced to poverty by charitably giving away their riches to the needy are all acknowledged to be extremely lovely and beautiful notwithstanding their tender and delicate physical appearance.

PURPORT. A person reduced to poverty on account of his charitably giving away his riches is all the more praiseworthy for that.

दरिद्री होनेपर जो मनुष्य यव (जौ) के तुसोंका संग्रह करनेकी वांछा किया करता है, वह धनाढ्य हो जाने पर संपूर्ण पृथ्वीको भी तृणसमान समझने लगजाता है । इससे सिद्ध होता है कि सारे पदार्थोंका लघुत्व और महत्त्व मनुष्योंके ऐश्वर्य और दारिद्र्यपर निर्भर है ॥ ४५ ॥

In straitened circumstances a man is even anxious to collect the empty husks, but afterwards when he is master of enormous wealth he will attach no more importance to the whole earth than to a piece of dry straw. It is, therefore, quite clear that the value of a thing is altogether dependent upon the wealthy or penurious condition of man.

PURPORT.

Strictly speaking, things possess no absolute value in themselves, but they are valued more or less according to the straitened or affluent circumstances of their owners.

The policy of kings resembles a prostitute in its being both true and false, cruel and kind, merciful and unmerciful, covetous and munificent, and expensive and lucrative (lit. full of plentiful resources).

This śloka which is quoted under भट्टवृद्धिः in the Sekhāshūtalāli (सुभाषिनावलि) of Ballabhadeva, at No. 3458, and anonymously in the Kāvya-prakāśa (काव्यप्रकाश) of Mammata, the Alankāra-sarvasam (अलङ्कारसर्वस्वम्) of Ruyyāṇaka, the Udaharanachandrika (उदाहरण-चंद्रिका) of Vaidyanātha, and the Kāvya-pradīpa (काव्यप्रदीपः) of Govinda, forms the 7th stanza of the Aśtaratna (अष्टरत्न). It stands under भट्टहरि in the Śāṅkharapaddhati at No. 1530.

Cf.—“अविधेयो भृत्यजनः शत्रूनि मित्रं प्रदायकः स्वाधी ।

विनशरीरता च भार्या मस्तकशूलानि चत्वारि ॥”

(सुभाषिनावलि).

न कश्चिच्चण्डकोपानामात्मीयो नाम भू- जाम् । होतारमपि जुह्वानं स्पृष्टो दहति पा-

जैसे स्पर्श करनेपर अग्नि अपने आहुति देनेवालेको भी तत्काल
जलादेती है वैसेही प्रचंड क्रोधवाद् राजालोग भी किसीको अपना आत्मीय नहीं समझते ॥ ५७ ॥

Kings in their anger have as little regard for their kinsmen and friends, as fire can be said to have for those who feed it with sacrificial offerings.

PURPORT. Kings when angry are never to be trusted by any, not even by their own kith and kin.

Quoted under Bhartrihari (भट्टहरि) in the Śārngadhara-paddhati (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति । १३७६), and under the Panchatantra (पञ्चतन्त्र) in the Subhāṣitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि । २७९९). The stanza is found in the Panchatantra.

Of.—(१) “ को नाम राजा प्रियः ” (षट्त्रे)

(b) “ Be guarded with monarchs, for, they are like fire, which blazeth but destroyeth. ”

(c) “ किं विश्वे द्विजिह्वस्य सुजगत्पेव भूभुजः ॥ १०९ ॥ ”

(अमरचंद्रसूरिकृतबालमारते शान्तिपर्वणि १ सर्गे).

(d) “ राजा मित्रं केन दृष्टं भुवं वा ” (पंचतन्त्रम् १।१४७),

 तः सेवाधर्मः परमगहनो योगिनामप्य-गम्यः ॥ ५८ ॥

सेवाधर्म (पराई चाकरी) अत्यंत कठिन और बड़े बड़े योगि- राजोंके भी अगम्य है। क्योंकि सेवकके कम बोलनेपर मूक होनेका, वचनचतुर होनेपर वाचाल और लवार होनेका, अतिनिकट रहने-
 पर ढीठ होनेका, दूर रहनेपर लजालु होनेका, सहनशील होनेपर डरपोक होनेका और असहनशील होनेपर नीचजाति होनेका कलंक सदैव लगाया जाता है ॥५८॥

The servant if keeping quiet is soon nicknamed as dumb, if eloquent he is accused of being talkative, if keeping too near to his master he is charged with impudence, if remaining at a distance he is blamed of bashfulness, if forbearing he is thought to be timid, and bold so as not to bear without a murmur the admonitions of his master he is sure to be stigmatised as a low-born fellow. We should therefore bear in mind that the art of serving another is extremely difficult being simply incomprehensible even by learned philosophers.

The last line is also found in the Hitopadesa (हितोपदेश) Verse 147, Book II., and the Panchatantra 1. 235.

Cf.—“ क्षान्त्या मूकः कोपयुक्तो मूर्खः सेवकमुच्यते ।

विस्तृत दुराचारी, देवकृपासे ऐश्वर्य पानेवाले और गुणद्वेषी
दुष्ट मनुष्यके दृष्टिपथमें रहकर कोई भी मनुष्य कुछ सुख नहीं

भावार्थ ।

नीच जनकी सेवा कदापि सुखदायक नहीं होती ॥

No one can ever live with the least convenience and comfort in the service (in sight) of a wicked person who has (1) proved himself to be the fruitful source of all evils, (2) set himself quite free from the bonds of morality, (3) added a great deal to the store of vices done in his previous existence, (4) found himself, by a special grace of good fortune, in a sudden turn of affluent circumstances, and (5) given various proofs of his bitter hatred of all kinds of merits.

PURPORT. None can ever be happy in the service of an evil person

Quoted anonymously in the Śiṅghaśatavali (सुभाषितावलि), at No. 441.

For the point of the stanza, cf

"The low born wretch,
That from his mean degree rises at once
To unexpected riches, treats his slaves
With barbarous and unbounded insolence."

(The Plays of Aeschylus, p. 157).

दुर्जनोकी मित्रता दिनके पूर्वार्द्धकी छायाके समान प्रारंभमें बड़ी फिर क्रमशः क्षयी होती है, परंतु सत्पुरुषोंकी मैत्री दिनके उत्तरार्द्धकी छायाके समान प्रारंभमें कम और फिर क्रमक्रमसे वृद्ध होनेवाली हुवा करती है ॥ ६० ॥

The friendship of the wicked and the good is just like the changing shadow of the first and second halves of a day; for, in the former case it gradually diminishes from much to little, whereas in the latter it grows from little to much.

Though the deer, the fish and the good are respecfisher, and the bad (literally, cheat) are enemical to them without having any cause whatever for it.

तावलि) at No. 422, and anonymously in the Kavyānuśāsan (काव्यानु- शासन) of Vāgbhatta. The verse also stands in the Suktāvali (सुक्तावलि).

लोकापवादका भय, शिवजीकी भक्ति, इंद्रियदमनकी सामर्थ्य
और दुर्जनोंकी संगतिका पूर्ण परित्याग, ये सद्गुण जिन सत्पुरुषोंमें
विद्यमान हैं उनके अर्थ नमस्कार है ॥ ६२ ॥

Bow to those good persons who are masters of the following merits viz. (1) to be anxious of mixing with gentlemen, (2) to be fond of good attributes in others, (3) to be humble before the elders, (4) to be ardently in love of knowledge, (5) to be satisfied with the enjoyment of their lawful wives, (6) to be afraid of getting a bad name in the world, (7) to be in sincere devotion of Shiva, (8) to be able to control their senses, and (9) to avoid the company of the bad!

This stanza which is quoted anonymously in the Subhāṣitāvalī (सभाषितावलि), at No. 2944 is also found in the Māhātāka (महानाटक) and the Saptaratna (सप्तरत्न).

महात्माओंके स्वाभाविक लक्षण हैं ॥ ६३ ॥

Fortitude in adversity, humbleness in prosperity, eloquence in council, bravery in war, strong desire for fame, and warm attachment to Śāstraic learning, are the natural attributes of noble-minded (great-minded) persons.

The Śārngadhara-paddhati (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धतिः । २०९) quotes it under Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरिः), and the Subhāṣitaravali (सुभाषितावलिः । २६७) under Mendhaka (मेण्डकः). The śloka is also found in the Hitopadeśa (हितोपदेशः । १।२४).

For the idea of the 1st line, cf.—

“ To hold on with fortitude in one condition and sobriety in the other is a proof of a great soul.” (The Meditations of Marcus Aurelius, p. 17).

गुप्तरीतिका दान, घर आएका सत्कार, पराया हित साधन करके मौन धारण करना, दूसरेके किए हुए उपकारका सभामें प्रकाश करना, लक्ष्मीका निरभिमान, और निंदारहित परकथाका संकीर्तन ये उत्तमोत्तम गुण सत्पुरुषोंमें स्वभावहीसे सिद्ध होते हैं, किसीके सिखाए हुए नहीं होते ॥ ६४ ॥

Who has ever taught the good (1) to conceal their charity from the public, (2) to show due respect and hospitality to their guests, (3) to make no mention of the favours they have done to others, (4) to disclose to the world at large the obligations in which they have been placed by their fellowmen, (5) to feel no sort of pride in their being rich, and (6) to talk respectfully of others ?

PURPORT. The aforesaid Asidhārā (असिधारा) vow is quite natural with the good and virtuous.

Quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि १८१), and the Kuralayānanda (कुलपानन्द).

For "प्रदानं प्रच्छन्नं" cf.—

(Alexander Dumas).

For the 2nd line of the stanza, cf.—

"He who has received a kindness should remember it for ever, and he who has conferred it should instantly forget it, if the former would bear the character of a good man, and the latter avoid that of a paltry spirit." (The Oration of Demosthenes upon the crown).

Without any regard to wealth, the hands of the good are naturally adorned by due charity, the heads by obedient bow to their elders, the mouths by speaking out truth, the ears by hearing the Śāstras, the victorious arms by matchless valour, and their hearts by good moral character.

Cf.—“ हस्तस्य भूषणं दानं सरयं कंठस्य भूषणम् ।

भ्रात्रस्य भूषणं शास्त्रं भूषणे किं प्रयोजनम् ”

(सुभाषितरत्नभाण्डागारे ५८।२९९) .

समृद्धिके समयमें महत्पुरुषोंका चित्त कमलके समान कोमल होजाताहै, परंतु आपत्तिकालमें वही चित्त महान् पर्वतशिलाके समान कठोरपन धारण करलेताहै ॥ ६६ ॥

In prosperity the heart of the great becomes as tender as a lotusflower, whereas in adversity it assumes the adamantine hardness of a mountain slab.

Quoted under Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) in the Subhāshitāvali
(सुभाषितावलि), at No. 200.

Cf.—(a) “सम्पत्तौ कोमलं चित्तं साधारापदि कर्कशम् ।

(कुसुमदेवस्य दृष्टान्तशतकम्)

(b) “It is the part of a great mind to be temperate in prosperity, resolute in adversity.” (Seneca)

For the latter half of the stanza, Cf.—

“पतिते व्यसने देवादारुणे दारुणात्मनि ।

संवर्मयति वज्रेण धैर्यं हि महतां मनः ॥” (अनर्घराघवे)

जैसे तपे लोहेपर पड़े वृष्टिके जलका तो नाम निशान भी नहीं
रहता और कमलके पत्रपर पड़ा हुआ वही जलबिन्दु मोतीके समान
दृष्टि आनेलगताह और वही जलबिन्दु स्वातिनक्षत्रमें सागरशुक्तिके
मुखमें पड़नेसे साक्षात् ही मोती बनजाताह वैसे ही अधम, मध्यम
और उत्तम गुण भी संसारमें प्रायः संमर्गसेही उत्पन्न होतेहैं ॥६७॥

A rain-drop if thrown upon a red-hot iron is even deprived of its own existence. whereas if it happens to fall upon the leaf of a lotus plant it soon assumes the appearance of a beautiful pearl, and the same is again turned into a real pearl if it chances to drop into the mouth of a seashell in the auspicious time of the Swati star. It is therefore to be inferred that the bad, mediocre, and good attributes of a thing are always to be traced to the company it keeps.

The verse stands in the Panchatantra (पञ्चतन्त्र १२। २५० ॥), and is quoted from that work by शार्ङ्गधर at No 330.

Cf.—(a) “ पुण्यं स्वर्गनिष्ठं सारिमु पातिन राक्तं सु मुक्ताकले कर्पूरं कदलीदलेषु
गरले व्याले स्थले कर्दमः ।

(b) “ Would you judge a man ? find out who his friends are.”
(Fenelon)

(c) “ If I touch my hand to a board, there is only a blunt sound but if I touch it to the key of an instrument there is a musical sound. And the effect produced upon a person by that which he comes in contact depends upon what there is to be touched ” (H. W. Beecher).

(d) “ A man is known by the company he keeps.”
(N. V. Bapit's Beauties of English literature.)

☞ There is a Spanish proverb which says, “ Tell me who you live with and I will tell you who you are.”

आज्ञावर्ती रहकर उसका हित साधन करे वही स्त्री, और आपत्ति- काल तथा सुखावसरमें समान वर्ताव करे वही मित्र समझना
चाहिये परंतु इन तीनोंका लाभ संसारमें विरले पुण्यवानोंकोही
प्राप्त होताहै ॥ ६८ ॥

The name of a son is only deserved by him who pleases his father by his good actions; that of a wife by her who is entirely bent on looking after the welfare of her husband; and that of a friend by him who is equally sincere in adversity and prosperity, but the enjoyment of these three gifts (i. e. an obedient son, a loving wife, and a sincere friend) is only granted to virtuous persons.

Quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 2929

Cf.—“स सुहृद्भ्यसने यः स्यात्सपुत्रो यस्तु भक्तिमान् ।

For the 1st line Cf.—“कोऽर्थः पुत्रेण जितेन यो न विद्वान्न भक्तिमान्”

(पंचतंत्रम् । १।४।)

For the 3rd line, Cf.—(a) “A friend in need is a friend in deed”

(b) “Be the same to your friends in prosperity and adversity”

(Periander. G. T.)

भावार्थ ।

जैसे प्रवृत्तिमार्गमें गमन करनेवालेके इष्टदेव विष्णु, मित्र राजा, निवास नगर और स्त्री सुंदररूपवती होते हैं, वैसेही निवृत्ति-मार्गमें गमन करनेवालेके इष्टदेव शिव, मित्र यति, निवास वन और भार्या पर्वतकी कंदरा समझना चाहिये ॥ ६९ ॥

A wise man should worship either Vishnu or Shiva; make friends with a king or a hermit; inhabit a town or a forest; and seek the company of a handsome wife or a mountain den.

PURPORT. A man should either enjoy the world or give it up altogether. In the former case, he should worship Vishnu, befriend a king, inhabit a town, and marry a handsome woman; whereas in the latter, he should worship Siva, befriend a hermit retire to forest, and live in a mountain cave.

Where are they who do not worship the wonderful virtues of the good that prove their greatness by humility, disclose their merits by dwelling at large upon the qualifications of others, achieve their ends by helping the undertakings of their fellowmen, and throw back the blame entirely upon the shoulders of their detracting enemies with a patient heart ?

As trees bend downwards at fruiting season, and new clouds lower to earth when carrying rain, so good men instead of being proud of their affluence, naturally become meek and humble in prosperity. Humility is quite natural with the benevolent.

The body of those who are bent on sympathising with the misery of others is rendered beautiful by the

To keep off sin, to direct towards good, to conceal weaknesses, to proclaim merits, to help in adversity, and to give pecuniary assistance when necessary are the characteristic marks of a true and sincere friend as mentioned by the wise.

As the sun expands the petals of the lotus flowers, the moon blossoms the night lilies, and the rain cloud waters the whole world, all out of their own free will, so good men naturally help the interests of others without the slightest request being ever made to their liberal hearts.

Cf—(a) “As the sun does not wait for prayers and incantations to be induced to rise, but immediately shines, and is saluted by all;
so do you also not wait for clappings of hands and shout and praise to be induced to do good, but be a doer of good voluntarily, and you will be believed as much as the sun. (Epictetus).

When water was mixed with milk, the latter gave all its qualities to it. Consequently when water saw the distress of milk it began to burn itself. The sight of its friend's calamity much agitated milk and it went out of the pot to destroy itself on the burning embers. At this stage water came to its help and the milk soon became calm and cool. The friendship of the good is just like it.

For the general drift of the stanza, compare the noble lines of Dryden.

I had a friend that lov'd me :
 I was his soul ; he liv'd not but in me :
 We were so close within each other's breasts,
 The rivets were not found that joined us fast.
 That does not reach us yet: we were so mix'd,
 As meeting streams ; both to ourselves were lost.
 We were one mass, we could not give or take,
 But from the same ; for he was I ; I He "

There can be no shadow of doubt that idleness is the greatest enemy of mankind, sitting within their own bodies. Industry is man's matchless friend, as no one can ever have the least cause for repentance and misery by being active or industrious.

PURPORT.

To be idle is to be one's own enemy but to be active is equivalent to the possession of the best of friends.

For the point of the stanza compare the well-known English proverb.—

"God helps those who help themselves."

Though at first sight this will not appear an exact parallel to the text, yet a little reflection will convince a thoughtful reader of the precise similarity of the powerful thought of the above adage which lays it down that to be active is to secure the help of God, the best of friends.

When beset with difficulties the virtuous can pass them over with great patience without the least distur-

When we see that Indra, the lord of gods and the special favourite of Hari, who was so fortunate as to have Mercury for his prime minister (lit leader), lightning for his weapon, the celestial beings for his army, the heavens for his citadel, and Airāvat for his elephant, was even defeated in battle by his enemies, the demons, it is proper for us to have full reliance on Fate, and relinquish the fruitless trust in our individual efforts.

देवतागण यद्यपि हमारे वन्दनीय हैं परंतु वह सब विधिके वशीभूत हैं, विधाता भी केवल प्रारब्धानुसार फल देता है और यह फल मनुष्योंके पूर्वसंचित शुभाशुभ कर्मानुसारही शुभाशुभ होते हैं । इसलिए हमको उचित है कि देवता और विधाताको छोड़कर उन कर्मोंकोही प्रणाम करें कि जिनके प्रतिकूल विधाता भी कुछ नहीं करसकता ॥ १४ ॥

We bow respectfully to gods, but alas ! they are all subject to Bidhi (Fate), who though worthy of worship is competent only to award according to a preordained destiny which is again the certain consequence of our own acts done in a series of former existences. We should, therefore, do well to give up our adorations for Gods and Fate, and take ourselves to the worship of our past actions over which Fate herself has not the least control.

Oh ye good ! if you wish to enjoy the pleasures and happiness of the world according to your heart's desires, then you should give up the vain efforts of acquiring all other merits and attributes, but take yourselves to the sincere devotion of the goddess of good conduct that is powerful enough immediately to change the evil into the good, the illiterate into the learned, enemies into well-wishers, invisible into the visible, and poison into nectar.

जिस प्रभावशाली कुसुमायुध ने ब्रह्मा, विष्णु और महेश इन तीनों देवताओंको मृगनयनी सुन्दरियोंके गृहकार्य करनेवाले दास बना रखे हैं। और जिसका चरित्र सर्वथा विचित्र और अकथनीय है उस कामदेवरूप भगवानके अर्थ हमारा नमस्कार है॥ १ ॥

One hundred stanzas on Śringār (शृङ्गार).

Bow to the illustrious Kusumāyudha (कुसुमायुध), the holder of a flowery bow (i. e. Cupid), who compelled Swayambhu or Bṛinhā (स्वयम्भु or ब्रह्मा), the Creator, Hari or Viṣṇu (हरे or विष्णु), the Protector-Sambhu or Mahādeva (शम्भु or महादेव), the Destroyer, of the Universe to be domestic servants of antelope-eyed, ladies, and whose strange deeds are far beyond the description of words !

मंदमंद मुस्क्यान, हावभाव, लज्जा, भय, पराङ्मुखता, अधखुले नेत्रोंके कटाक्ष, वचन, ईर्ष्या, कलह और लीलाविलासादि सब प्रकारसेही स्त्रियोंके बंधनरूप होनेमें कुछ भी संदेह नहीं है ॥ २ ॥

There is no doubt that women ensnare men by their smiles Bhâwas (भाव) or feelings and emotions, modesty, fear, turn of face, half-opened glances, words, jealousy, amorous quarrels and all other graceful sports.

Side-long looks with contracted pupils and skilful display of eyebrows, honeyed and affectionate words, modest smiles, and artful slow movements and postures of their bodies equally serve as ornaments and weapons to women.

भावार्थ ।

संसारिक मनुष्योंके लिये संपूर्ण जगतही नवयौवना रमणियोंके
 हावभावोंसे व्याप्त होरहा है । यहां तक कि इस संसारमें उनको ऐसा
 कोई भी स्थान दृष्टि नहीं आता कि जहांपर इस विघ्नसे सुरक्षित होकर

One who is ardently in love of women always finds the different directions of the world entirely filled with the charming glances of lotus-eyed Nawodhās (young and newly married women) which are somewhere marked with the play of their fair eyebrows, somewhere with modesty or bashfulness, somewhere with fear, somewhere with sportive gracefulness and somewhere with the unsteady motions of their fickle eyes resembling the splendour of a dark blue lotus in its full blossom.

भावार्थ ।

प्रत्यक्ष रूपसे तो इस श्लोकमें स्त्रियोंकी असाधारण सुंदरताका वर्णन किया गया है । वैराग्य पक्षमें इसका भावार्थ इसप्रकार समझना उचित है । स्त्रियोंकी छवि स्वभावहीसे बहुत मनोहर है इसलिये इनसे अपनी आत्माकी रक्षाके निमित्त मतिमानोंको सदैव सुसज्जित रहना चाहिये ॥

A face that can put to shame the splendour of the refulgent moon, a pair of eyes that can laugh at the beauty of a blooming lotus, a fair complexion of person outshining the lustre of gold, a luxurious growth of hair eclipsing the the sootish colour of the black bee, a pair of heaving breasts apt to make us forget the frontaj globes on the forehead of elephants, the rounded⁴ and fully developed buttocks, and a sweet enchanting speech are the natural ornaments of young females.

यौवनावस्थामें प्रवेश करनेवाली मृगनयनी तरुणियोंकी कौनसी बात मनोहर और रमणीय नहीं होती? उनके मंदस्मित मुखारविंद, स्वाभाविक चंचल दृष्टिपात, अभिनव भोगविलासकी कथासे सरस वाक्यप्रबंध और हावभावसहित गमन, सबके सबही कामीजनोंके मनको तत्क्षण हरण करलेतेहैं ॥ ६ ॥

भावार्थ ।

शृंगार पक्षका अर्थ तो उपरोक्त अनुवादसे स्पष्टही है परंतु वैराग्य पक्षमें भी हम इस श्लोकको इसप्रकार संगत कर सकतेहैं । तरुणी रमणियोंकी मंदस्मितादि संपूर्ण चेष्टाही अत्यंत मनोहर होतीहै इसलिये इनसे रक्षा करनेके निमित्त मुमुक्षुजनोंको विशेष सज्जद रहना चाहिये ॥

What is not handsome and enchanting in the persons of young and fair-eyed damsels just entering the outskirts of womanhood? The gentle smile of their faces, the naturally fickle glances, the sweet words drenched with the honey of artful references to their blooming youth and recent amors, and slow movements of their limbs like the soft wavings of lotus stems are one and all extremely charming and lovely.

भावार्थ ।

सानुरागी सांसारिक जनोंके देखने, सूंघने, सुनने, स्वादु लेने, स्पर्श करने और ध्यान करनेके लिए तो इस संसारमें स्त्रियोंके मुखारविंदादिके सिवाय और कुछ नहीं है परंतु वैरागियोंका (अर्थात् संसारसे मुक्त होनेकी इच्छा करनेवालोंका) मार्ग इससे बिल्कुलही निराला है ॥

For lovers, (1) the affectionate and pleasant countenance of their antelope-eyed sweethearts is the best sight to look at; (2) their sweet breath, the best perfume to smell; (3) their lovely speech, the best music to hear; (4) the ambrosia of their lips, the best delicacy to taste; (5) their tender bodies, the best thing to touch; and (6) their blooming youth and charming grace, the best objects to thing about and adore in the world.

There is none whose mind is not subdued by the artless glances—like those of frightened fawns—of those youthful and lovely women the melodious jingle of whose loose anklets and waist-belts has already put to shame the sweet-toned swans.

The comparison of the jingle of women's anklets to the melodious songs of swans is a favourite idea with Sanskrit poets. In the 2nd act of Vṛishabhānujā (वृषभानुजा) Krishna is made to say:—

The charms of a beautiful woman whose body is

There can be no doubt that the best poets have invariably erred in calling women as weak; for, how can they be justly styled to be such (i. e. weak) who have

हारसे विभूषित कुचयुगलको धारण करनेवाला तेरा शान्तिमय
शरीर भी हमारे मनमें अनेकानेक विकार उत्पन्न करताहै यह
बड़े आश्चर्यकी बात है ॥ १२ ॥

खेदका विषय है कि इस श्लोकमें “संयमिनः” आदि पदोंका
प्रयोग करके कविने जो चमत्कार दिखलाया है वह अनुवादमें
स्पष्ट नहीं दिखलाया जासकता । आशा है कि शुद्ध हिंदीके
जाननेवालोंको इन पदोंके निम्नलिखित दोदो अर्थोंके अवलोकन
करनेसे कविका आशय समझनेमें कुछ कठिनता न होगी ।
स्त्रियोंके शरीरको शान्तिमय होनेपर भी विकार उत्पन्न करनेवाला

कहनेका कारण भी इन पदोंके दूसरे अर्थसे प्रत्यक्ष होजायगा ।

(क) “संयमिनः ” = १ संवारे हुए और २ जितेंद्री ।

(ख) “श्रुतेरपि पारङ्गते” = १ कर्णान्तायत अर्थात् कानपर्यन्त देखनेवाले या विशाल और २ वेद वेदान्तादि शास्त्रोंमें पारंगत ।

(ग) “द्विजानां” = १ दांतोंके और २ ब्राह्मणोंके ।

(घ) “मुक्तानां” = १ मोतियोंके और २ संसारसे मुक्त हुए मनुष्योंके ।

Oh delicate lady! though thy person fully resembles a calm and contented Yogi by thy wellcombed hairs, large eyes, regular set of naturally clear teeth, and a couple of heaving breasts adorned with beautiful wreaths or necklaces of excellent pearls, it is still causing a great deal of internal disturbance in the midst of our hearts!

An ordinary English reader will not quite understand the the exquisite beauty of this stanza as well as the reason which enables the poet to compare the person of women to that of Yogis. But a fair Sanskrit scholar will find no difficulty in tracing the secret to the double interpretations of the words संयमिनः, श्रुतेः द्विजानाम् and मुक्तानाम् which equally mean well-combed or self-denying, of the ear or the Sâstrâs, of teeth or the twiceborn, and of pearls or emancipated souls. As the English tongue is here found to be incapable of such niceties of wordplay, the aforesaid words are above translated only in their former sense.

Sanskrit poetry is very full—rather overful—of the description help us to a considerable extent to put out their anger, to reinstate ourselves into their favours and to bring about the wished-for reconciliation with our sweethearts far sooner than it could have been under any other circumstance.

इस वसंतकालमें स्थानस्थानमें पथिकोंकी विरहीणी स्त्रियोंकी वियोगाग्निसे निकली हुई मंजरीरूपी शिखा प्रज्वलित होरहीहै, आम्रके वृक्षोंमें कोयल उत्कंठासहित अवलोकन कर रहीहैं और नवीन खिले हुए पलाशके पूष्पसमूहकी सुगंधि चुरानेवाले और मार्ग चलनेके श्रमको दूर करनेवाले मलयाचलके पवन चल रहेहैं ॥ ३६ ॥

इस श्लोकमें कविने वसंतऋतुकी स्वाभाविक महिमा वर्णन की है ॥

The sight of mango stalks representing as it were the burning flame of the fire of separation from his beloved wife, the passionate looks of female cuckoos, and the sweet-scented breeze of the Malaya mountain blowing with the stolen odour of the newly blossomed Pātals that can allay the fatigue of the way, all combine to add a great deal to the mental pangs of the unfortunate traveller away from home.

कामोद्दीपन नहीं होता? ॥ ३७ ॥

The advent of the lovely season of Spring when the whole atmosphere is quite saturated with the sweet perfume of copious mango blossoms, and the bees are almost maddened with drinking the flowery juice, is powerful enough to make us ardently long for the company of our beloved persons. To be sure, there is none who can successfully stand the irresistible force of Love in Spring.

Beautiful garlands, fan-breezes, lunar rays, pollen dust, tank, sandal powder, pure wine, fine palaces, few (necessary) clothes of delicate fibre, and lotus-eyed women constitute a special privilege of the blessed few when they are pained with the excessive heat of summer.

लिपा पुता स्वच्छ महल, चंद्रमाकी निर्मल प्रकाशमान चांदनी,
 प्राणप्यारीका मुखकमल, अत्यंत सुगंधित चंदनकी रज और
 मनोहर पुष्पमाला कामीजनोंके मनमें बहुत क्षोभ उत्पन्न कर

 किसी प्रकारका विकार नहीं कर सकते ॥ ४० ॥

A neat and clean house, the clear and refulgent moon, the lotus-like face of sweethearts, fragrant sandal dust, and charming garlands are able to cause a powerful storm into the hearts of the passionate; but, on the contrary, they are quite helpless to produce the least effect upon the calm and serene temperament of those who have resolutely turned their faces from sensual pleasures.

When we consider the point of the stanza we cannot fairly justify its place in the description of Summer. However, the poet seems apparently bent on bringing the cooling effects of cleanliness, moon, ladies, sandal and flowers to the notice of his readers.

की है। “दीपितकामा” “विकसितजातिः” “पुण्यसुगन्धिः” और
“उन्नतपीनपयोधरभारा” तरुणी और प्रावृद् दोनोंहीके exciting men's passions by the fragrant odour of full-blown Jāti flowers and the thick gathering of rising

In the following couplet we have got a very striking contrast to the idea of the text; for, here, the poet Vṛiddhi (वृद्धि) compares the rainy season to an old woman.

In the dark nights of Nabhas or Shrāwana (नभस् or a tremendous noise of roaring clouds, and when footpaths are quite imperceptible to the eyes, the golden flash of lightning beautifully shining across the sky is at once a source of great delight and disturbance to fair-eyed ladies.

The downpour of rain is particularly smart and heavy during the month of Śrāwan which generally falls in with July; add to it the deafening roar of the clouds in a dark night; and the miseries or fears of a lovely woman will be found really astounding.

For blessed persons, a foul rainy day is even chan-are unable to go out of their bedrooms on account of the incessant downpour of rains, they gladly return to their close embraces ; as well as when the cool particles of water in the surrounding atmosphere give them a refreshing sensation, and allay the excess of fatigue they might have incurred in their sensual pleasures.

Sensual pleasures are, no doubt, fruitless and a great hinderance to our renouncing the world. People may therefore hate them as they like, and stigmatise them as the source of all woe and misery. However, there is something very powerful and undefinable in their matchless might to cause a strong agitation even into the hearts of those who having forsaken mundane objects have entirely devoted themselves to the search of the First Principle or True Cause.

You are the acknowledged preceptors of those who have given themselves to the study of Vedānta and we are the followers of poets whose words being never monotonous are always very beautiful and sweet; but let us make no secret of saying that upon the surface of this earth no other virtue is greater than that of doing good to others, and that nothing is more delightful here than lotus-eyed women.

What use is there in talking a great deal of non-sense and incoherent prattle? तथ्यमेतत् ॥ नान्यन्मनोहारि नितम्बिनीभ्यो
दुःखस्य हेतुर्न हि कश्चिदन्यः ॥ ५४ ॥

हे मनुष्यो ! हम पक्षपातरहित सत्य सत्य कह रहे हैं कि इस
संसारमें सुंदर नितंबस्थल धारण करनेवाली युवतियोंको
छोड़कर न तो कोई मनोहर पदार्थही है और न कोई दुःखादिका हेतुही है ॥ ५४ ॥

भावार्थ ।

स्त्रीको छोड़कर संसारमें सुख दुःखका हेतु और कोई नहीं है ॥

Oh my friends ! I speak real and impartial truth when I say that the only cause of pleasure and pain (good and evil) in this world of ours is beautiful women of well developed buttocks.

Quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि १२३३).

Cf.—(a) "सन्तः शृणुध्वं हृदये निदध्वमुत्क्षिप्य बाहू परिरारटीभि । न सुभ्रुवां तुल्यमिहास्ति रम्यं न सुभ्रुवां तुल्यमिहास्त्यरम्यम् ॥ "

(b) "Alas ! the love of women ! it is known

To be a lovely and a fearful thing." Byron's Don Juan.

(c) "जो जगमें होता नहीं, वामलोचना वाम ।

रसिक सुना जाता नहीं, कहीं दुःख सुख नाम ॥" (रसिक कवि).

तावदेव कृतिनां हृदि स्फुरत्येष निर्मलविवे-

ज्ञानवानोंके हृदयमें निर्मल विवेकरूपी दीपकका प्रकाश केवल
तबतकही रह सकताहै कि जबतक उसके मृगनयनी तरुणियोंके
चंचल नेत्रोंकी पवनका झकोरा न लगे ॥ ५५ ॥

The lamp of clear sighted judgment and knowledge in the hearts of good and virtuous persons can burn only so long as it is not blown out by the clever and flickering glances of antelope-eyed women.

PURPORT.

Woman destroys all discretion in man.

The idea of the stanza is a favourite point of oriental authors.

Cf.—(a) “यावद्दृष्टिर्मृगाक्षीणां नो नरोनर्हिमद्गुरा ।

तावज्ज्ञानवतां चित्ते विवेकः कुहते पदम् ।”

(b) “प्रभवानि मनसि विवेको विदुषामपि शास्त्रसंभवश्चावत् ।
निपनन्ति दृष्टिविशिष्टा यावज्ज्ञेन्दोवराक्षोणम्” (रसमंजरी)

(c) “तदवधि कुशलोपराणशास्त्रमनिशतचारविचारजो विवेकः । यदवधि न पदं दधाति चित्ते हरिणकिशोरदृशो दृशोर्विलासः ।”
(भामिनीविलासः शुङ्गारोक्तासः)

(d) “कष्ट एष तरलस्वरूपीनां भावमंगुरदहनन्तानिपातः । एष चेन्मनासे लज्जविपाकः किं कारिष्यति विवेकवराकः”

(मर्तुहरिनिर्वेदम्) .

There is also a couplet Shukla Sati, the wellknown Persian poet, which may thus be translated in Hindi : “विवेकिपोंके निर्मल प्रका- शका यश उसी समयतक रहताहै जबतक वह स्त्रियोंके चरित्रोंके बने रहें ।”

भवति वचसि सङ्गत्यागमुद्दिश्यवार्ता श्रुत-मुखरमुखानां केवलं पण्डितानाम् ॥ जघन-मरुणरत्नग्रन्थिकाञ्चीकलापं कुवलयनयना- नां को विहातुं समर्थः ॥ ५६ ॥

शास्त्रके पढे हुए चतुर पंडितोंके मुखमें वैराग्यसूचक उपदेश केवल कथनमात्रही समझना चाहिये । क्योंकि कमलनयनी
खियोंकी लालरत्नोंसे जटित कांचि कलापयुक्त जंवाका परित्याग
करनेमें वस्तुतः कोई भी समर्थ नहीं होता ॥ ५६ ॥

Men professing to be learned in the Sāstras, do not preach the doctrine of renouncement in real earnest, but simply with their tongue ; for, no one in the world is ever able to give up the sight of lotuseyed women's beautiful buttocks adorned with belts of crimson precious gems.

Cf.—(a) “वेऽप्यङ्गनानां प्रवदन्ति दोषान्वैराग्यमार्गेण गुणान्विराज । ते दुर्बला मे मनसो विवर्कः सद्भाववाक्यानि न तानि तेषाम् ५”

(वाराहीसाहिता ७४ अध्यायः)

(b) “बुरी बुरी सब जग कहे, रयागो किनसे जाय ?

नारि हृदय भिनके रसिक, ईश्वर प्रगटे आय ॥” (रसिक कवि)

स्वपरप्रतारकोऽसौ निन्दति योऽलीकपण्डितो
युवतीः ॥ यस्मात्तपसोऽपि फलं स्वर्गः स्वर्गे- ऽपि चाप्सरसः ॥ ५७ ॥

जो मिथ्याभिमानी पंडित तरुण सुंदरियोंकी निंदा करतेहैं वह
स्वयं भी धोखा खातेहैं और दूसरोंको भी धोखा देते हैं, क्योंकि
अनेकानेक तपश्चरणोंका फल तो स्वर्गकी प्राप्ति, और स्वर्गलाभका
फल अप्सराओंका भोगविलास है ॥ ५७ ॥

That learned man, who preaches the doctrine of hate against young women is indeed a false philosopher who having first deceived himself is deceiving others ; for, the enjoyment of Apsaras or heavenly nymphs is the ultimate end of heaven, which, in its own turn, is again the result of a series of religious devotions and virtues.

Cf.—(a) “ कर्तुं धनानां फलमध्यमाहुः फलं कर्तुनामविवादि पुण्यम् । पुण्यस्य पूर्णं फलमिन्द्रलाको द्विरष्टवर्गः स्त्रिय एव नाकः ॥ ” (चतुर्वर्गसंग्रहः । ३ । ३).

(b) “ अहो धार्ष्ट्यमसाधूना निन्दतामनयाः स्त्रियः १५ ”

(वाराहसंहिता ७४ अध्यायः)

According to the Mahomedan religion, Hoories are said to constitute the prominent feature of the heavenly bliss of blessed souls.

इस पृथ्वीपर मदनमत्त गजराजका कुंभस्थल दलन करनेवाले
 बहुतसे शूरीर विद्यमान हैं, और ऐसेही प्रचंड मृगराज सिंहका
 वध करनेवाले मनुष्य भी बहुत मिल सकतेहैं; परंतु बलवानोंके
 समक्ष हम यह बात जोर देकर कह सकतेहैं कि कामदेवका गर्व गंजन करनेवाले विरलेही मनुष्य होंगे ॥ ५८ ॥

Quite true that there are men on this earth who are able to break into pieces the frontal heads of wild elephants, as well as some who are skilful to take out the life of lions, the cruel and dreadful lords of the deer; but I can safely assert before the courageous, that persons who can successfully brave the attacks of Cupid and subdue the passion of love are undoubtedly very few.

Cf.—“शूरान्महायूरतमोऽस्ति कोऽवा मनोजबाणैर्व्यथितो न यस्तु ”

(शंकराचार्यस्व प्रश्नोत्तररत्नमालायां)

Successful resistance of the charms of fair ladies is, no doubt, the most difficult task for the Sons of Adam.

A man can walk in the path of righteousness, subdue his senses, preserve his modesty, and hold to his moral training, until his heart is not pierced by the stupifying arrows of women's glances shot off from their arched brows and blue eyelashes.

The verse is quoted anonymously in the Subhāṣitāvalī (सुभा- षितावलि १२४६) and under Bānabhāṭṭa (बाणभट्ट) in the Śārngadhara-paddhati (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति) at No. 3300. I must add that I have not been able to trace out the verse either to कादम्बरी or to हर्षचरित, the two celebrated works of बाणभट्ट.

Cf.—“न श्रुतेन न वित्तेन न वृत्तेन न कर्मणा ।

Brahmā, the Creator, is Himself afraid of throwing an obstacle into what has been undertaken by women in the hurry and excitement of their passionate love.

Cf.—“What woman wills, heaven wills also.”

(A. Dumas' Margurite de Valois.)

For the verification of the poet's statement the reader is referred to the desperate actions of Portia, Juliet, Imogen, Rosalind and others which sometimes make the heroines of Shakespeare appear to be something more than ordinary women.

Cf.—“कहा दिया नहीं करसके, कामवती जब होय ?

भावार्थ ।

कामदेवकी अग्नि प्रज्वलित होतेही बड़ाई, पंडिताई, विवेक और कुलीनता तत्काल नष्ट हो जातेहैं ॥

A man can preserve his greatness, learning, nobility and wisdom only so long as his frame is not set aglow with the burning passion of love caused by the fire of Puncheshu (पंचेषु), the holder of the five *arrows (i. e. Cupid.)

शास्त्रके जाननेवाले, विनयशील और आत्मज्ञानियोंमेंसे भी
इस संसारमें कोई विरलाही पुरुष होगा कि जो सद्गतिका लाभ
कर सके, क्योंकि वामलोचनवाली स्त्रियोंकी कुटिल भ्रूलतारूपी
कुंजीसे नरकद्वारके कपाट उनके लिए पहिलेहीसे खुले रहते हैं ॥ ६२ ॥

Out of those who are wellread in the Sāstras, who are renowned for their morality and who are favoured with the knowledge of self, a few persons can only be ever successful to attain to the state of eternal beatitude; for, the key of the arched brows of crooked-eyed women always opens the doors of hell for the passage of mortals.

Cf.—“द्वारं किमेतन्नरकस्य नारी” ३ (श्रीशंकराचार्यस्य प्रश्नोत्तरमाला).

Sanskrit poets when dwelling on the dark side of women generally take delight in describing them as the foremost obstacle in man's entrance into heaven.

अहो ! कैसे कष्टकी बात है कि दुर्बल, काणा, खोड़ा, बूचा, बांडा, जखमी (घायल), दुर्गन्धयुक्त, सहस्रशः कीड़ोंसे व्याप्त शरीरवाला, क्षुधातुर, जीर्ण ओर गलेमें मिट्टीके घड़ेका गरगना धारण करनेवाला कुत्ता भी कामान्व्य होकर कुत्तीके पीछे पीछे दौड़ता फिरताहै । हाय ! इस निष्ठुर कामदेवको ऐसे मरे हुए प्राणीके मारनेमें भी कुछ लज्जा नहीं आती ॥ ६३ ॥

When we see that a wretched dog that is (1) lean, (2) one-eyed, (3) bald, (4) earless, (5) shorn of its tail, (6) wounded, (7) stinking, (8) covered with thousands of insects, all over the body, (9) pained with excessive hunger, (10) worn out with age and (11) wearing the circular head of a broken earthen pot around its neck, is even compelled to run passionately after a bitch, we cannot help crying unreserved shame upon the meanness and cruelty of the god of love who is not ashamed of trying his deadly arrows on such a miserable creature already dead of its own misfortunes.

The stanza which is quoted under Chandrika in his Auchitya-vichāracharchā (औचित्यविवारचर्चा) by Kshemenendra (क्षेमेन्द्र) is given anonymously in Nimishilhu's commentary on Ruṣrata's Kāvya-lankāra (रुद्रटकुलकाव्यालङ्कार), and the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावली) at No. 3390.

भावार्थ--जैसे कोई राजा अपनी मुद्राके उल्लंघन करनेवालोंको उचित दंड देताहै वैसेही कामदेव भी अपनी स्त्रीमुद्राके अनादर करनेवालोंको नग्रीकरणदि उचित दंड देताहै ।

The fools who have forsaken the great womanseal of the god of love (who has the design of a fish emblazoned on his standard) which can bring them every kind of success in their various pursuits, are indeed devoid of all sense and wisdom; for, they have voluntarily given up the only source of all happiness in this world and are now wandering about in fruitless search of the same. But, see, that they have met adequate punishments at the hands of Cupid who has doomed some to roam about in the world with naked bodies, some with cleanshaven heads, some with bushy and shaggy hairs growing all over the body, some with twisted and matted locks, and others with human skulls in their hands pegging alms from door to door.

PURPORT—As kings punish those who disobey the royal seal, so Cupid inflicts condign punishments on those men who set at naught his woman-seal.

Quoted anonymously by Vāṣṭava in his Rāvaṇaśāstra (काव्यानुशासन), and quoted under मर्तुङ्गी in the शाङ्ख्यरत्न in No. 3082. The verse stands in the Panchatantra IV. 34. (पंचतन्त्रम् ४ तन्त्रम् ३४).

जब कि पवन, जल और वृक्षादिके पर्ण (पान) का भक्षण करनेवाले विश्वामित्र पराशरादि ऋषिगण भी स्त्रियोंका सुंदर मुखकमल देखकर मोहित हो गए तो घृत, दुग्ध और दधिसहित शाल्यादि अन्नके भोजन करनेवाले मनुष्योंका इंद्रियदमन करना तो विन्ध्याचलके समुद्रमें तरण करनेके समान बिलकुलही असंभव है ॥ ६५ ॥

When learned saints like Vishvāmitra (विश्वामित्र) Parāshara (पराशर) and others who supported themselves upon the simplest food of bare leaves of trees and water were even thrown into a state of confusion and unconsciousness at the sight of lotus-faced women, how can it then be ever possible for those men who eat the dainties of various grains as rice, wheat, &c. together with milk, ghee and curdle, to keep absolute control over their senses ? The subjection of passion in worldly men is as much out of question as the swimming of the Vindhya over sea.

A woman is indeed the personification of pure

To be in company of our beloved wives is indeed delightful;
but separation from them tells as badly upon our health as poison.

Who is it that has created the ambrosial poison of woman, the whirlpool of confusion, the home of immorality, the town of adventurous undertakings, the source of sin and crime, the embodiment of hundreds of deceits, the field of faithlessness, the barrier across the doors of heaven, the gate of the infernal city (hell), the magical basket of all illusionary tricks, and the one unfailing snare for enticing men ?

Notwithstanding the fact that redness is merely a natural attribute of lotuses, the black bee is yet misled to take it for a sure sign of their love towards it, and so being mad with joy it hovers continually around the flowers; just in the same way, though amorous and graceful acts are quite natural with sportive women, yet they go to make indelible impressions upon the hearts of fools who take them for all in all as to their (women's) sincere attachment to them.

The radical meaning of the word Shadanghri (षडङ्घ्रि) is six footed. But the application of the word is confined to the bee.

Flirtations are generally natural to the fair sex and we must not always take them for real love.

flavour, and will begin to taste of bitter poison like the rotten fruit of a pomegranate.

The simile may be extended to the regular set of teeth of a woman's mouth to the wellset seeds of a pomegranate fruit, both of which are seen to lose their charm when they are long past the period of maturity.

While the words of women are saturated with nectar their hearts are exclusively filled with poison. It is, therefore, quite reasonable that men should eagerly drink the lips of ladies with their mouths, and beat (rub) the breasts with their fists.

Quoted under Kālidāsa Māghan (कालिदासमाघ) in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3380. Also found in the Panchatantra (पंचतन्त्र १ । १८९), the Kurāṅgānanda, (कुवलयानन्द), and the Śhrīngāra-vindu (शृङ्गारविन्दु).

How exquisitely the poet accounts for men's kissing women's lips and rubbing their breasts ! Is it not natural that one should eagerly advance towards the place which contains nectar so as to drink it off without delay ? Is it not that poison is a fit object of man's abhorrence, and does it not deserve a severe rubbing (beating) which contains the deadly bane ?

 nary snakes are liable to cure by use of medicines, but persons bitten by serpentine ogles of clever women are entirely incurable even through the skill of renowned charmers.

Makarketana (मकरकेतन) or Cupid, the wonderful fisherman, has thrown his woman-net into the ocean of existence, and through the offer of a tempting bait of labial flesh he is soon able to drag out the human fish and then to roast him alive into the fire of passionate love.

What a nice metaphor do we find here? We have got the fisherman, his net, his hook, his bait and every-thing else ready for immediate use. Not content with all this he has also provided against the last chance of escape of the poor things by keeping at hand a burning fire in which he roasts the fishes caught by him.
When once into the snares of love, escape is out of question.

The bite of a big, swift-footed, crooked-moving, ferocious, hooded, and jetblack serpent is indeed to be preferred to that of the large, unsteady, crooked, brilliant, lovely, and dark-blue eyes of a young and beautiful woman : because skilful doctors for a charitable treatment of snakebites are plentifully found all over the world ; but there are neither Vaidyās nor medicines to effect a perfect cure of him whose heart is pierced by the glances of ladies possessing the afore-said qualifications.

Charmers cure snakebites, not only without taking anything from the patients but also at a great personal sacrifice to themselves.

What wise man can ever take delight in loving a prostitute—the mowing scythe of the heavenly creeper of knowledge—who, through the mere hope of getting a small amount of money, can even sell her lovely person to the disgusting embraces of a miserable creature that is born blind, ugly, worn out with age, rustic of low origin, and whose very sight is wholly unbearable on account of the stinking flow of his leprous sores ?

Cf.—“वित्तेन वेत्ति वेश्या स्मरसदृशं कुष्ठिनं जराजीर्णम् ।

A prostitute is the fire of love which strengthens through the fuel of beauty, and burns to ashes the youth and wealth of the libidinous.

Besides its being identical in sense the following verse is almost alike with the above stanza in its verbal construction :

“अथ च मुरतज्वालाकामाग्निः प्रणयेन्धनः ।

नराणां यत्र हूयन्ते यौवनानि धनानि च ॥”

(सुभाषितरत्नभांडागारः)

अ त्वानां यौवनान्शानां वेश्या नामेह वेधसा ॥”

(कथासरित्सागरः । शशाङ्कवतीलंबकः १ तरंगः) .

parently to strike a successful blow at immorality by holding to division the figure of a harlot in darkest colours.

What respectable person can ever condescend to kiss the lips of a prostitute which though very lovely are in reality a disgusting tray or dish constantly spit by spies, soldiers (mercenaries), thieves, slaves, actors, and sensual cheats ?

The point of the stanza may be thus summarised :—Prosti-tutes are generally enjoyed by the dregs and rabble of mankind, and therefore they are not in the least the fit objects of social intercourse of the gentry.

For further explanations of the words विट &c. see our note on this stanza.

Those people are indeed blessed whose hearts are never agitated at the sight of beautiful ladies with (1) unsteady, big and large eyes, (2) youthful, lovely, thickset, and heaving breasts and (3) charming lines upon their tender abdomen.

The word त्रिवली means threefolds. It is especially applied to the threefold wrinkles of skin just above the navel of healthy and wellformed women. The poet here speaks of them as creepers on account of their zigzag appearance.

people, the moon has yet availed herself of the happy opportunity of assuming the form of a big pearl to adorn the point of thy acquiline nose, and thus to drink off the ambrosia of thy lips in order to cure herself of her periodical wanings.

Needless to say that the poet has here represented the pearl of a woman's nose-ring as a full moon drinking the ambrosia of her lips.

The enjoyment of splendid palaces, graceful young ladies, and spotless wealth and power together with their necessary symbols can only last with the definite term of our past virtues; for, when the influence of our previously accumulated good is no longer in force then all these gifts are soon scattered away and lost to the winds like a string of pearls broken in the course of an amorous quarrel.

Before His marriage with Pārvati (पार्वती) Shiva succeeded in maintaining a complete indifference to the charms of women, and He went even so far as to reduce to ashes the god of love who had unfortunately once conspired with Spring to excite His latent passion; but after His espousing that beautiful lady as the mistress of His heart, He became so much attached to her that He was unable to part with her even for the slightest moment, and to ensure this He assumed the wonderfully composite form which is half man and half woman. Shiva is therefore the only one who stands conspicuous both among (1) the worldlings and (2) the ascetics; for once tasting the poisonous fire of Cupid's serpentine arrows, and always led astray by passionate lust, man is quite unable either to enjoy the sensual pleasures or abandon them altogether.

The mental tendencies of people on the face of the globe are quite different from one another, e. g. some are indifferent to the world and are engaged in the devotion of the Supreme Being; some are passing their days in the study of morality and politics; and some have turned their attention to the sole enjoyment of sensual pleasures.

May the god Śiva (whose person is resplendent with luminous rays of crescent moon adorning the luxuriant locks of hair on His head; who reduced to ashes, quite in a sportive manner, the god of love, as if it were a mere moth; and who is the abode of all good), the lamp of perfect knowledge, long burn brightly into the mental abodes of Yogis driving away the dense cloud of ignorance which is covering their conscience with a thick layer of darkness !

It is needless to remark that a woman loses her youth by delivery.

The verse quoted under भर्तृहारे in the शाङ्ख्यभारत at No. 4152.

भोगा न भुक्ता वयमेव भुक्तास्तपो न तप्तं
वयमेव तप्ताः॥ कालो न यातो वयमेव याता- स्तृष्णा न जीर्णा वयमेव जीर्णाः ॥ १२ ॥

विषयादिका भोग नहीं किया किंतु हम ही भुगत गए, तप-
श्रम भी नहीं किया किंतु हम स्वयंही संतप्त हुए, समय नहीं
गया किंतु हमही गए गुजरे और तृष्णा शिथिल नहीं हुई किंतु हम खुदही बुढ़ा गए ॥ १२ ॥

It is we who are exhausted but not the pleasures ;
it is we who are done up but not the penances ; it is we who are gone but not the time ; and similarly, it is we who have grown old but not the desire of gain.

Quoted under Paribrajaka परिव्राजक in the Auchitya richāra charchā (औचित्यविचारचर्चा), and anonymously in the Subhāshitāvali (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3396. The verse stands under भर्तृहरि in the Shārdūlāpaddhati at No. 4150.

For the idea of the 1st line of our text, compare, Bhartrihari's words in the Bhartriharinirveda (भर्तृहरि निर्वेद) :—

“मुज्यन्ते विषया मयेति भवति भ्रान्ता मतिर्देहि-

बहुतसे क्लेश भी सहन किए परंतु क्षमापूर्वक न सहे, गार्हस्थ्य-सुखका परित्याग भी किया परंतु संतोषके हेतु नहीं किया, शीत, पवन और तपनके असह्य दुःख भी सहे परंतु तपश्चरण नहीं किया

We have borne insults, but not with a patient or forgiving spirit; we have given up the pleasures of home, but not through contentment; we have put up with unbearable cold, wind, and heat, but we have not undertaken the pains of a religious penance; we have attentively thought of wealth day and night, but we have not meditated on the sacred feet of Siva; in short, we have done all that is generally done by saints and hermits, but alas! we have not obtained the good results of the aforesaid actions (because they were not actuated by virtuous motives).

The stanza which stands as 9th in the Sāntigatāka Part, I.
(शान्तिगतकम् । १ परिच्छेदः) is quoted under Bhartrihari भर्तृहरि in the Sārngadhara-paddhati (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति । ४१५३) and anonymously in the Subhāshitāvali (सुभाषितावलि । ३१७८) and Namiasādhū's commentary on Rudrata's Kāvya-lankāra (रुद्रकृत काव्यालङ्कारः).

बलिभिर्मुखमाक्रान्तं पलितैरङ्कितं शिरः ॥

मुखपर जुरियें पड़गई हैं, शिरके बाल श्वेत होगए हैं और
सारे अंग यद्यपि शिथिल होगए हैं, परंतु एक तृष्णा अब भी
ज्योंकी त्योंही नहीं किंतु प्रतिदिन तरुण होती जाती है ॥ १४ ॥

The face is marked over with wrinkles, the head is covered with hoary hair, and the limbs (members of the body) are all weak and worn out with age ; yet strange to say, that the desire of gain is still acting as youthfully as ever.

येनैवाम्बरखण्डेन संवीतो निशि चन्द्रमाः ॥

तेनैव च दिवा भानुरहो दौर्गत्यमेतयोः ॥१५॥

अहो ! चंद्रमा और सूर्यकी भी कैसा दुर्गति है कि जिस मेघखंडसे रात्रिके समय चंद्रमा संवेषित रहताहै उसही मेघसे दिनमें सूर्यका भी आच्छादन हो जाताहै ॥ १५ ॥

The same piece of cloud which covers the moon in night also covers the sun in day. What a great misfortune is it to which both the powerful luminaries are thus subjected ?

The meaning is : How pitiable is the penurious condition of sun and moon who both cover themselves with the same piece of cloud respectively sharing it in day and night !

PURPORT.

It is useless to wail and weep over one's own misfortunes.

चाहे कितनेही दिनतक क्यों न रहें विषयादि एक दिन अवश्य
जानेवाले हैं इसलिए हम स्वयं उनका त्याग करें अथवा वह हमारा
त्याग करें। उनके हमारे वियोगमें तो किसी प्रकारका संशय नहीं, परंतु संसारी मनुष्य फिर भी स्वयं इनका परित्याग नहीं करते।
जब अपनी इच्छासे विषयादि हमारा त्याग करते हैं तो हमारे
मनको अत्यंत दुःख होताहै परंतु जो हम स्वयं इनका परित्याग
कर दें तो अनंत शांतिसुखका लाभ कर सकतेहैं ॥ १६ ॥

To whatever length may sensual pleasures be ever prolonged, they are sure to end some day or other ; then, how is it that men are not willing to give them up ? When they go away themselves they are undoubtedly the cause of immense troubles to the mind, but when we can leave them of our own free will we may rest assured of reaping everlasting contentment and happiness from the noble step.

ज्ञानके प्रकाश करनेवाली शांतिको धारण करनेपर और
तृष्णाका उन्नत शिखर शांत होजानेपर, मनुष्यको उस विशेष
सुखका अनुभव हो जाताहै कि जिसकी दीर्घ कालतक विविध
ऐश्वर्य भोगते रहनेके कारण देवराज इंद्र भी सदैव लालसा किया करताहै ॥ १७ ॥

When the bud of knowledge begins to blossom, and the rise of high aspirations and desire of gain are entirely subsided, we are sure to attain that sort of supreme contentment which is even coveted by Indra, the lord of gods, who, through advancement of age, has grown too much addicted to his love of wealth and livelihood.

This stanza has been explained in different ways by different translators. But the text as it stands here cannot have another interpretation but that which we have given above.

भिक्षाटन करके नीरस भोजनस पेट पालन करतेहैं और वह भी
दिनमें एकही बार मिलताहै, कोरी पृथ्वीपर शयन करतेहैं, निज
देहमात्रकोही अपना परिवार समझते हैं, और शतशः फटे पुराने
टुकड़ोंसे बनी कंथासे शरीरको ढकतेहैं, परंतु बड़ेही खेदका विषय
है कि विषयवासना अब भी हमारा परित्याग नहीं करते ॥ १८ ॥

Though he has no other food than tasteless alms earth, no other dependents but his own body, and no other clothes than a wallet patched of hundreds of worn out rags, yet, alas ! he is not forsaken by worldly enjoyments !

It is quite true that a moth throws itself down into the burning flame of a lamp, and a fish devours the meat of deadly bait attached to the fishing-hook ; but we must admit, that both the moth and the fish are entirely ignorant of the fact that this step of theirs will lead to their utter destruction. Whereas, on the contrary, we human beings cannot give up the temptations of sensual pleasures, notwithstanding the fact, that we are fully conscious of their being the inextricable snares of all our calamities and misfortunes in the world ! The influence of worldly delusion is, no doubt, tremendously great and mysterious !

When we see that there had been such magnanimous souls as Brahmā who have created the world; others, as Vishnu who have repeatedly preserved it from utter destruction; others as Parashurām (परशुराम) who after conquering have charitably given it away to the Brāhmans, as if it were a mere straw; and others, as Bali (बलि) who have been holding undivided sway over the fourteen spheres; we cannot find the least possible ground for the vain conceit of those who can claim only a few small villages as their own.

thou art famous by thy fortunes, whereas the fame of our good name is spread by poets throughout the world.
Thus, oh proud chief, that darest insult the learned, where does lie the great difference between our respective positions, that thou turnest thy face so proudly against us, for we too are quite regardless of thy favours ?

शतशः राजाओंने जिस पृथ्वीको क्षणमात्र भी अमुक्त नहीं छोड़ी उस अनेक भूपालोंकी भोगी हुई भूमिका लाभ करके भूमि-पालोंका इस कदर अभिमान करना सर्वथा अनुचित है; परंतु कष्टका विषय है कि इस सारी पृथ्वीके अंशोंके छोटेसे अंशके एकमात्र खंडके स्वामी भी आज दिन मूर्खताके हेतु विषाद करनेके बदले फूले अंग नहीं समाते हैं ! ॥ २४ ॥

What magnanimous chiefs can pride over the possession of this poor earth which has been continually enjoyed from its very existence by hundreds of kings that are now no more ? But, alas ! those who can claim only a nominal portion of a part of its part do now delight in calling themselves as kings. From this we must infer that the foolish are generally prone to be happy where, on the contrary, they ought to be sadly grieved.

Surrounded on all sides by water, like a small lump of mud, the entire earth is no doubt a very insignificant object in herself; besides, a number of chiefs have taken possession of her by means of a series of battles, and are thus holding their sway over her in hundreds of paltry states. It is therefore no wonder that these meanly chiefs may or may not give anything to the needy; but, fie on those wretched creatures who can ever degrade themselves by asking a particle of wealth at even the hands of such contemptible kings.

Learning had formerly been used to remove the mental troubles of calm and tranquil souls; but in course of time it gradually came to be employed as an instrument of securing sensual pleasures to the worldlings ; however, it is a matter of great regret and shame that seeing the kings (the lords of earth) as quite averse to the spread of its cause learning is daily descending to the lowest level.

The birth of that great man is indeed a memorable event in the history of the world whose white skull is ever being borne as an ornament of head by Siva, the enemy of love; but, now, alas! we see that the generality of mankind are humbly bowing their heads at the feet of others for the sole satisfaction of securing a few days' living, and the realisation of this boon is looked upon as something really grand. However, we do not know that they can ever justify in the least possible degree the vain pride and conceit which they have the impudence to indulge in this disgraceful step.

The point of the stanza appears to be this:—Foolish men instead of being grieved feel a sort of pride in bowing their heads to others.

If thou art the lord of riches, we are the masters of learning (speech); if thou art a great warrior, we are also powerful to suppress the feverish pride of our adversaries in a verbal contest; if thou art served by wealthy persons, we are served by theological scholars who throng to us for the removal of their intellectual darkness; therefore, if thou hast little regard for us we have less for thee, and thus saying, we turn our back upon thee.

In obedience to the teachings of the Hindu Śāstras every man must renounce the world and take himself to forest in his old age. This being the ultimate aim of all good Hindus, the poet here depicts the noble thought of a pious person who though discharging the duties of a householder never forgets his future end to give up the world and contemplate his Maker in seclusion.

सर्वस्वका दान करके तरुण करुणासे परिपूर्ण हृदय होकर
संसारकी विपरीत गतिका स्मरण करते हुए और श्रीशिवजीके
चरणकमलोंकी शरण लेकर किसी पवित्र वनके बीचमें निवास
करते हुए शरद्ऋतुके पूर्ण चंद्रमाकी चांदनीसे प्रकाशित रात्रियें हम कब व्यतीत करेंगे ? ॥ ४८ ॥

After charitably giving away with a compassionate heart, the last particle of our possessions, and thinking the worldly objects as productive of no ultimate good, we are anxious to pass the pleasant moonlit nights of autumn in the midst of some holy forest, and abandon ourselves to the concentrated worship of the sacred feet of Siva, the only shelter from the cares and anxieties of the world !

The footnote appended to stanza 46 may also be appropriately read in connection with this śloka. We may add that before renouncing the world a man has to give away in charity all his property to the poor and needy so that he may not be any way troubled of its thoughts.

वयमिह परितुष्टा वल्कलैस्त्वं च लक्ष्म्या सम इह परितोषो निर्विशेषो विशेषः ॥ स तु
भवति दरिद्रो यस्य तृष्णा विशाला मनसि
च परितुष्टे कोर्थवान्को दरिद्रः ॥ ४९ ॥

हम तो केवल वल्कलसे संतुष्ट हो जाते हैं और तुम धनसे होते
हो, परंतु संतुष्ट होजानेमें दोनोंही समान हैं और तब हम दोनोंमें
किसी प्रकारका अंतर नहीं रहता, क्योंकि जिसकी तृष्णा विशाल
है वही मनुष्य दरिद्र है, किसलिए कि मनके संतुष्ट होजानेपर न
तो कोई धनाढ्य है और न दरिद्र है ॥ ४९ ॥

Oh king ! when we are content with barks of trees, and you with riches, there is no difference between us, as regards our mental contentment; for one whose wishes are unlimited is, no doubt, poor; but, when the mind is content in itself no one can be called rich or poor.

Those persons who have determined to put an end to their actions (i. e. who have entirely effaced from their minds the notion of good or bad) by considering their palms as sacred vessels, eating the plentiful supply of alms obtained by their continued wanderings, taking the ten expansive quarters of the globe as their neat clothing, and lying down upon the bed of extensive earth; those who have secured true mental contentment by thinking the attainment of worldly indifference as the ultimate end of their life; and those who have given up the various ways of degrading themselves before others, are indeed deserving of all praise and honour.

The verse is same as śloka 7 in the Sāntisatuka Part IV.

चक्रवर्ती महाराजाओंका प्रसन्न करना असंभव है, अन्यान्य भूपालोंका चित्त घोड़ेके समान चंचल होता है और हमारा मनोरथ बहुत बड़ा है क्योंकि संसारके सर्वोत्तम पदका लाभ करना ही हमारा हार्दिक उद्देश्य है, और यह वृद्धावस्था हमारी देहका नाश किए देती है, और मृत्यु तो हमारे सर्वस्व जीवनका ही हरण कर लेती है । इसलिए हे मित्र ! विद्वान् मनुष्यके लिए इस जगत्में तपश्चरण करनेके सिवाय कल्याणकारक कर्म दूसरा कोई नहीं है ॥ ५२ ॥

To secure the favour of our lord is a hard and difficult task, and to please the minds of kings which are as unsteady as horses is also impossible; whereas our ambitions are high, and our minds are bent on attaining to the supreme end (i. e. salvation); the body is old and worn out and death is depriving us of our entire existence; it is, therefore, true that a wise man can look up for no other good in this world except the performance of virtuous actions and penance.

The word तपस् here means either moral virtue or meditation connected with the practice of personal self-denial or bodily mortification.

Worldly pleasures are as unsteady as the flash of lightning appearing in the midst of a clouded sky; life is as transient as rain drops falling down from a group of clouds scattered in various directions by the force of wind; and the aspirations of youth are also extremely frail and fickle. I would, therefore, implore the learned that they must consider all mundane objects as quite transitory and consequently set their minds to the practice of Yoga the attainment of which is quite easy through patient concentration of mind.

निवास करनेके लिए सुंदर सुंदर महल, श्रवण करनेके लिए मनोहर संगीत और भोग करनेके लिए प्राणप्यारीके समागमका सुख क्या इनके लिए विद्यमान न था ? (अर्थात् था) । परंतु इन साधुजनोंने पूर्वोक्त संसारसुखको भ्रमण करते हुए पड़नेवाले पतंगोंके पक्षोंकी पवनसे अस्थिर दीपककी छायाके समान चंचल समझकर गहन वनके एकान्त स्थानमें प्रस्थान करनाही उत्तम समझा है ॥ ६६ ॥

Notwithstanding the existence of beautiful palatial mansions for their dwelling, sweet music for their hearing and the enjoyment of a beloved wife for their love, the virtuous saints have forsaken them all and retired into forest (for the sake of meditating on God); because they have rightly understood the aforesaid objects as frail and momentary as the flickering flame of a lamp which is rendered the more unsteady on account of the flapping of a foolish moth hovering around its small and feeble light.

The verse which stands as 14th in the Sāntiśataka Part II (शान्तिशतकम् । २ परिच्छेदः) is quoted under Bhartrihari भर्तृहरि in the Sārngadharapaddhati (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धानि) at No. 4114, and anonymously in the Subhāshitāvali (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3326.

Is it that edible roots have all disappeared from the caves of mountains, or springs have ceased to flow from rocky slopes, or trees have stopped to grow their fruitful and barky branches, that we are thus forced to look up to the face of those proud and perverse, persons whose brows are ever dancing with the vain conceit of a small quantity of wealth which they have barely succeeded to accumulate after a series of difficulties and troubles ?

This stanza is same as ślōka 3 in the Sāntigatāko Part IV. (शान्तिशतकम् । परिच्छेदः). Cf.—(a) “निष्कन्दाः किमु कन्दरोदरमुवः क्षीणा-

ष्योंको अपना निर्वाह करते हुए हम जहां तहां दृष्टि कर रहे हैं ६८॥

Is it that the beautiful retreats (lit. slabs) of the Himâlayâs cooled down by Gangetic waves and inhabited by Vidyâdharâs (विद्याधराः) have altogether disappeared from the face of this earth that people have thus condescended to lead a poor disgraceful life upon the alms of others ?

The poet indirectly means to say that we should rather leave this world and resort to solitary caves of the Himalayas than submit to the disgrace of begging alms at the hands of our fellow beings. Persons who can give with a good grace are very few.
Instead of being pitied beggars are frequently disgraced for their poverty by their wealthy donors.

हुई पृथ्वी भी अवश्य चलबिचल हो जाती है, तो हाथीके बच्चेके
कर्णाग्रभागके समान अत्यंत चंचल इस शरीरके विनाश होनेमें कौनसा आश्चर्य है ? ॥ ६९ ॥

When we know that at the end of the four Yugas (युगाः) or ages, the splendid Meru (मेरु) being attacked by the fire of universal destruction, shall also fall; when we see that vast seas, the abode of innumerable sharks and crocodiles, shall also dry; and when we are sure that the earth, though sustained by deep-rooted mountains, shall also collapse; what possible faith can we fairly put into this feeble mortal frame which is as unsteady as the ever flapping ears of a young elephant ?

अकेला, आशरहित, शान्तचित्त, पाणिपात्र (हाथकोही पात्र समझनेवाला), और दिगम्बर (नग्न या दिशामात्रकोही वस्त्र समझनेवाला) होकर, हे महादेव ! मैं अपने कर्मोंको निर्मूलन करनेमें कब समर्थ हूंगा ? ॥ ७० ॥

Oh God (Siva), when will the day come when I shall be able to put a stop to all my actions whether good or bad by being (1) alone, (2) devoid of all aspirations, and (3) contented, as well as by thinking my hands as necessary vessels and the different quarters of the globe as a sufficient clothing for my naked self ?

Quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3404.

The line एकाकी गृहसंत्यक्तः पाणिपात्रो दिगम्बरः also occurs in the Panchatantra V. 15. (पंचतन्त्र ५ तन्त्र १५).

The word कर्मनिर्मूलन literally means uprooting actions.

Every action of man is done with some purpose either good or bad. Destruction of actions means doing things without any personal concern. The doctrine is fully explained by Srikrishna to Arjuna in the Bhagawadgītā.

Unless we seek real enjoyment of communion with self which is capable of destroying all worldly anxieties and dangers of our hearts, it is of very little importance (1) whether we clothe ourselves in threadbare rags or dress in beautiful and neat silken garments; (2) whether we possess no other companion excepting our only wife or command the services of numerous servants together with horses, elephants and other conveyances for our use; and (3) whether we feast on delicious tables of rice and other dainties or subsist ourselves on rotten and simple food got towards the close of a day.

The construction and meaning of this stanza are not quite clear.

भक्तिर्भवे मरणजन्मभयं हृदिस्थं स्नेहो न

विरक्ति, कामदेवके विकारोंका अभाव और संसर्गदोषसे रहित
एकान्त निर्जन वनका वास ऐमे वैराग्यके सिवाय मनुष्यको और
क्या वांछनीय है ? ॥ ७३ ॥

When a man is faithfully devoted to Siva, when his heart is always awake to the pangs of birth and death, when he has not the least attachment to his relatives, when he is dead against passionate excitements of love, when leading a secluded life into the interior of a lonely forest he is quite free from the evil effects of society at large, and when his mind is wholly indifferent to worldly pleasures, there is nothing more to be asked for or desired by him.

The construction of the Śloka is very puzzling and consequently its exposition requires some stretching of intellect. The difficulty arises out of the terse and laconic form of diction used by the author.

तस्मादनन्तमजरं परमं विकासि तद्ब्रह्म
चिन्तय किमेभिरसद्विकल्पैः ॥ यस्यानुष-ङ्गिण इमे भुवनाधिपत्यभोगादयः कृपण-

इसलिए हे मनुष्यो ! संसारके मिथ्या विकल्पोंको छोड़कर उस
अनंत, अजर, परमोत्कृष्ट और प्रकाशरूप ब्रह्मका चिंतन करो,
कि कृपणलोगोंके माननीय त्रिलोकीके राज्यादिके भोगादि
जिसका स्वयमेव अनुगमन करते हैं ॥ ७४ ॥

Leaving aside all sceptic and vain reasonings, you should devote yourself to the contemplation of that endless immortal, supreme, and luminous Brahma in whose imperial train all enjoyments of worldly sovereignty, which are so much coveted by misers, invariably follow.

This śloka which is same as stanza 24 in the Sāntiśataka Part III. (शान्तिशतकम् । ३ परिच्छदः) is quoted under Bhūtrīhan (भूतहंरि) in the Subhāṣitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3152.

Rev. Wotham thus translates the latter half of this stanza in a different way — If a man be truly seeking unity with the supreme Being, all earthly pleasures and powers seem worthy only of the notice of low-minded men.

The point seems to be this:—In the opinion of a truly religious person all earthly powers and enjoyments are worth considering only by the mean.

पातालमाविशसि यासि नभो विलंघ्य दि- ङ्मण्डलं भ्रमसि मानसचापलेन ॥ भ्रान्त्याऽपि
जातु विमलं कथमात्मनीनं तद्ब्रह्म न स्म-रसि निर्वृतिमेषि येन ॥ ७५ ॥

हे मन ! तू अपनी स्वाभाविक चंचलतासे कभी तो पातालमें प्रवेश कर जाता है, कभी उछल करके आकाशमें गमन करने लगता है और कभी दशों दिशाओंमें इधरका उधर भ्रमण करता फिरता है; परंतु कैसे खेदकी बात है कि तू भूलकर भी उस आत्म-प्रकाश परब्रह्मका कभी स्मरण नहीं करता कि जिसके चिन्तन करनेसे तेरी मोक्ष हो सकती है ! ॥ ७५ ॥

By thy natural unsteadiness sometimes thou penetratest into Pātāla (पाताल) or the depths of nether regions, sometimes traversest ethereal spaces, and sometimes wanderest over different quarters of the globe ; but oh mind ! thou never thinkest, even by mistake, of that supreme Being who is sitting within thy ownself ; and by whose meditation thou canst easily attain to the highest contentment and happiness !

The verse is ascribed to Arugata (अर्गट) in the Subhāṣitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3447.

The word निर्वृति may also mean tranquility.

रात्रिः सैव पुनः स एव दिवसो मत्वाऽबुधा
जन्तवो धावन्त्युद्यमिनस्तथैव निभृतप्रार-
ब्धतत्तत्क्रियाः ॥ व्यापारैः पुनरुक्तभुक्तविषयै-

वही रात और वही दिन समझकर ये मूर्खजन उद्योग करते हुए निज निज कर्ममें प्रवृत्त होकर पूर्वभुक्त विषयादिका बारंबार भोग करते रहते हैं । इस प्रकार इस संसारक्रमसे नित्य प्रति विडंबित होकर भी मोहजालमें फँसे हुए हम लोग कुछ भी लज्जित नहीं होते यह बड़े आश्चर्यकी बात है ! ॥ ७६ ॥

Without entertaining the least idea of the flight of time, the ignorant people who have set themselves to their cherished pursuits are daily led astray to run after their individual undertakings, and earnestly long for the pleasures which they have repeatedly enjoyed a number of times. However though we are thus frequently deceived by the illusionary course of this world we are never ashamed of our own folly. It is indeed a great mystery !

PURPORT—Day follows night, night follows day, and so it continues uninterruptedly. As there is no end to the repetition of days and nights, so there is no end to man's work. (Every morning man goes without murmur to his work of yesterday, with unabated vigour). Being thus deceived by nature we long to enjoy the same objects over and over again without ever being ashamed of our folly.

विरतिरूपी कांताके प्रसंगसे प्रमुदित होकर पृथ्वीतलकी मनोहर शय्या, भुजलतारूप विपुल उपधान, आकाशरूप मंडप, अनुकूल पवनरूप व्यजन (पंखा) और चंद्रमारूप प्रकाशमान दीपक आदिकी विविध विभूतिसे युक्त मुनीश्वर शान्तचित्त होकर राजाके समान सुखपूर्वक शयन करताहै ॥ ७७ ॥

A contented saint who is prone to take this earth for his fine sofa; his creeper-like arms for ample pillows, the endless sky for his canopy, a favourable breeze for his fan, the refulgent moon for his lamp, and total indifference to world for his loving wife, always sleeps with as much ease and comfort as a great monarch of enormous wealth and power.

The stanza is same as ślōka 8 in the Śānti-gāthā Part IV.
(शान्तिशतकम् । ४ परिच्छेदः) .

Cf.—“भूः पर्यङ्को निजभुजलता कन्दुकं खं वितानं

जिस महाराज्यके सामने त्रिलोकीका राज्य विरस प्रतीत
होताहै, उस परब्रह्मके ध्यानको प्राप्त करके आसन, वस्त्र और मान
आदि घटनासे युक्त भोगविलासमें प्रीति करना सर्वथा अनुचित
है क्योंकि भोग भी केवल वही एक है जो परमोत्कृष्ट और सदैव
प्रकाशमान है, और जिसका आस्वादन करलेनेपर त्रिलोकीके
राज्यादिसंबंधी विषय सबही विरस और फीके होजातेहैं ॥ ७८ ॥

After attaining to that great spiritual knowledge which entirely deprives the sovereignty of the three worlds of all its charms; you must not feel the least affection for rank, dress, and honour for, the only enjoyment worthy of a man's aspiration is that which is supreme and immortal, and which, when once relished by him, renders the pleasures of universal empire as altogether insipid and unpleasant.

The word शासन literally means rule, government, power. Here it perhaps refers to control of passions so absolutely necessary to a Yogi.

Cf.—“ जिन नरवरने है लिया, रासिक योगका स्वाद । वे सब जगके राजको, जानत हेतु विषाद ॥ ”

(रासिक क वि).

वेद, स्मृति, पुराण और महाविस्तृत शास्त्रके पठन पाठनसे तथा स्वर्गरूपी ग्राममें निवासमात्रका फल देनेवाले यज्ञादि कार्योंके करनेसे क्या प्रयोजन है ? क्योंकि संसारके बंधनसे उत्पन्न होनेवाले दुःखप्रपंचको विध्वंस करनेमें कालाग्निके समान स्वात्मानन्दका लाभ करनेके बिना पूर्वोक्त निःशेष कर्म वाणिज्यवृत्तिके समान है ॥७९॥

What advantage is there in studying Vedas (वेद), the Smritis (स्मृति), the Puranas (पुराण), and the unmerous Shâstras ; or in performing various sacrificial rites and ceremonies whose only fruit is to secure for man a small residence in the village of heaven ? Excepting the attainment of that spiritual knowledge of self which is the one great source of all contentment and happiness, and the sole deadly fire for the destruction of worldly anxieties and cares, all other pursuits are nothing more than mercenary crafts.

“ There is but one key that will unlock the mysteries of God, and that key is within yourself. Science cannot do it, for science deals only with the surface of things. We must leave the surface and go into the depth of our own souls. It is useless to expect to find God any where until you have found Him within yourself ; and having found Him there, you will find Him everywhere. ”

मनुष्योंकी आयुष्य जलके बुद्बुदके समान चंचल है, यौवनकी शोभा थोड़ेही दिन स्थिर रहनेवाली है, द्रव्यादि पदार्थ मनोरथके तुल्य शीघ्र विनाश होनेवाले हैं, विषयादि भोगविलास वर्षाकालमें चमकनेवाली बिजलीके सदृश हैं और प्राणप्यारी ब्रियोंके आलि-
 गनका सुख भी बहुत चिरस्थायी नहीं है । इसलिए हे मतिमानो ! संसारके भयरूप समुद्रकी परलीपार जानेके लिए परमात्माके ध्यानमें मग्न होनाही उचित है ॥ ८० ॥

Life is as unsteady as waves of water, beauty of youth is only lasting for a few days, riches are momentary like thought, all enjoyments are as transient as flashes of lightning amidst a raining cloud, and the..... of our sweethearts are likewise extremely fleeting. Consequently if you be really anxious to cross the ocean of worldly woes you should not fail to concentrate your mind on the absolute devotion of Brahma. —

The phrase "कतिपयदिवसस्थायिनी" is also to be found in the Lhōjaprabandha (भोजप्रबन्ध) at page 12, Bombay Edition.

Cf.—(a) "Why should affection cling to the vain world,

As the gentle move of a Shafari (शफरी) of a small glittering fish does not cause the least possible undulation into the waters of a deep ocean, so this circumscribed universe is likewise incompetent to tempt the minds of great magnanimous souls.

Quoted under Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) in the Subhāshitāvali (सुभाषितावलि । ४९५). and the Śārngadharapaddhati (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति । २६१).

Cf.—“अक्षोऽप्य हृदयं बतेह महतामम्भोनिधौनामिव ॥ १३७ ॥”

(कथासारसागरः । शशाङ्कवतीलंबकः २८ तरंगः).

ब्रह्माण्ड or egg of Brahma here stands for this world.

The word जातु is an indeclinable and means ever or at all.

The mind of a wise man is here compared to an ocean and the world to a small fish.

When I was quite ignorant through the dark influence of Love, I saw the whole world to be entirely full of women ; but, now by applying the collyrium of true knowledge to the eyes, I regain my perfect vision, look on all things as alike, and discern the presence of Brahma throughout the three worlds.

चंद्रमाकी किरणें निस्तंदेह मनोहर हैं, तृणसहित वनभूमि भी
रमणीय प्रतीत होती है, साधुजनोंका समागम आनंददायक है,
शान्तिजनित मुख और काव्योंकी विचित्र कथा भी अत्यंत सुंदर
होती हैं और इसही भांति रतिकलहसे उत्पन्न हुए बाष्पबिंदुसे चंचल
प्राणप्यारीका मुखारविंद भी बहुत मनोहर मालूम होता है, परंतु
इस चित्तके संसारकी अनित्यता जानलेनेपर ये सारे रमणीय पदार्थ कुछ भी सुखदायी नहीं होते ॥ ८३ ॥

भावार्थ—चित्तके अस्थिर होनेपर सब प्रकारकी रम्य वस्तु भी
अरम्यही प्रतीत होती है इसलिए येनकेन उपायसे चित्तवृत्तिका स्थिर करनाही सर्वथा मुख्य है ॥

Pleasant indeed are the rays of moon, the green and verdent soil of woods, the company of saints, the happiness of contentment, the interesting stories of the Kavyas (काव्य) or high class literature, and the delightful face of a beloved wife glittering with beads of tears produced by anger; but when the mind is convinced of the mortal state of things, they are all deprived of their several charms.

PURPORT.—As every thing pleasant appears unpleasant to one whose mind is unsteady or disturbed, so it is the first and foremost duty of man to secure the equanimity of his mind.

भिक्षा मांगकर खानेवाला, जनसंसर्गसे रहित, स्वच्छंदतापूर्वक
विचरनेवाला, दान देने और लेनेसे विरक्त मार्गमें पड़े हुए फटे
पुराने वस्त्रखंडोंकी बनी हुई कंथाको धारण करनेवाला, मान और
अहंकाररहित और शांतिसुखके भोग करनेकी एकमात्र इच्छा
रखनेवाला कोई विरलाही तपस्वी होताहै ॥ ८४ ॥

There are but few hermits (1) who are content with leading a mendicant's life, far away from the crowded throngs of men ; (2) who are absolute masters of their senses (actions) ; (3) who are always indifferent equally to give and take ; (4) who clothe themselves with the coarse cloth of torn-out pieces of rags found scattered in streets ; and (5) who are regardless of every attention and honour paid to them, devoid of vain pride and anxious to enjoy the sole happiness of a contented and tranquil heart.

The word tapaswi (तपस्वी) literally means a person who practices penance. The real meaning of tapas तपस् is meditation connected with the practice of personal self-denial or mortification.

प्रताप है कि आज मैं परब्रह्ममें लयलीन होनेको समर्थ हुवा हूं

Oh mother Earth, father Air, friend Fire, relative Water, and brother Sky, I herewith bow before you all with folded hands; because, it is to you and you alone that I am really indebted for the final absolution of my soul, inasmuch as the joint assistance of all of you has enabled me to perform a lot of virtuous actions resulting in the rise of true spiritual knowledge which, in its turn, has destroyed the illusionary influence of the world; and having sanctified the soul of all impurities has thus empowered it to merge into Parabrahma (परब्रह्म), the Supreme Being.

The stanza is same as in the Sāntiśataka Part IV. (शान्ति- शतकम् । ४ परिच्छेदः). It is quoted under मर्वहरि in the शार्ङ्गधरपदादि at No. 4095.

यावत्स्वस्थमिदं शरीरमरुजं यावज्जरा दूरतो

जबतक यह शरीर रोगादिसे रहित होकर तंदुरुस्त बना रहे,
 जबतक वृद्धत्वस्था न आवे और जबतक इंद्रियोंकी शक्ति ज्योंकी
 त्यों बनी रहे और जबतक आयुष्यका क्षय न होवे, विद्वान
 मनुष्योंको उचित है कि आत्मकल्याणके निमित्त यथोचित प्रयत्न
 करतेवें क्योंकि घरमें आग लगनेपर कूप खोदनेका उद्योग सर्वथा
 निष्फल है ॥ ८६ ॥

A learned man should always try for the good of his soul while (1) he is hale and healthy, (2) his body is quite free from attacks of various diseases, (3) he is not set upon by old age, (4) he is in full unimpaired possession of all his senses, and (5) there is no sign of decline of his life. Of what possible use is the effort of sinking down a well when the house is already in flames?

The verse is quoted under मर्त्यशरीर in the शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति at No. 679.

Cf.—(a) “यावत्स्वस्थमिदं देहं यावन्मृत्युश्च दूरतः ।

Alas ! (1) we have neither studied the philosophy that enables us to lead a moral and modest life, as well as to stop the mouths of our adversaries and disputants;
(2) nor have we raised up our fame to heaven by breaking the globular heads of elephants by means of pointed swords; (3) nor have we drunk in moonlit nights the nectar of our sweetheart's tender lips; we have therefore uselessly wasted away our youth like burning out a lamp in a desolate house !

जो ज्ञान सत्पुरुषोंके लिए अभिमानादि नाश करनेका हेतु होताहै वही ज्ञान अन्यान्यजनोंके लिए मदमानादि उत्पन्न करनेका कारण बन जाताहै; वैसेही जो एकान्त निर्जन स्थान संयमीजनोंको विषयादिसे विमुक्त करताहै वही स्थान कामीजनोंके मनोमें कामो- द्दीपनका कारण होजाता है ॥ ८८ ॥

The same knowledge which is conducive to extirpate the existence of vain conceit from the minds of the good is also productive of vanity and pride into those of others. A lonely place which frees those who have obtained complete control over the senses from attraction to world likewise becomes the cause of lustful excitement in passionate hearts.

Cf.—“मदोपशमनं शास्त्रं स्वकार्मां कुरुते महम्” । (सूक्तवलि: १३).

The poet means to say that every thing is either good or bad according to the tendency of our mind towards virtue or vice.

इस संसारमें कहीं तो वीणाका मधुर गान और कहीं हृदय-
विदारक रुदन श्रवण करनेमें आताहै, कहीं मन हरण करनेवाली
तरुणी स्त्री और कहीं जरावस्थाकी झुर्रियोंसे विकलित शरीरवाली
वृद्धा स्त्री देखनेमें आतीहै, और इसही तरह कहीं तो विद्वान
मनुष्योंकी गोष्ठी और कहीं मदिरासे मतवालोंकी कलह सुनी
जातीहै, इसलिए हम यथार्थतासे यह बात निश्चयपूर्वक नहीं कह
सकते कि यह जगत् अमृतमय है या विषमय है ॥ ८९ ॥

Here we hear the music of a flute, and there the weepings and wailings of afflicted souls ; here we see a charming lady, and there an old person with worn out and wrinkled body ; and here again we find a concourse of learned men, and there a quarrelsome lot of drun-kards. We are, therefore, quite unable to say whether the world is made up of nectar or poison.

मनके मनोरथ सारे हृदयहीमें जीर्ण होगए, यौवनावस्था भी चलीगई, और खेदका विषय है कि गुणग्राहियोंके न होनेसे हमारे गुण भी सब निष्फलही रहे कि इतनेमेंही महाबली और क्षमारहित यमस्वरूपी काल झटपट आ पहुँचा । हाय ! अब मुझको ज्ञात हुआ कि कामदेवका शासन करनेवाले श्रीशिवजीके चरणारविंदोंको छोड़कर इस संसारसे मुक्त होनेका दूसरा उपाय कोई नहीं है॥ ९०॥

The aspirations have ceased to exist in the mind, and the delightful period of youth is likewise gone ; my qualifications have borne no particular fruit without the appreciators of their real merits ; and the powerful and cruel destroyer of all (death) has suddenly come over me. But, alas ! I now understand at the eleventh hour that there is no other means of escape from the miseries and cares of the world than the worship of Siva's feet !

Taking गुणः for virtues, some render the 2nd line as follows:-

"The very virtues in our own bodies have become barren without being recognised by others." But virtue is virtue whether recognised or not. Virtuous men have nothing to fear from death. The above rendering is therefore objectionable.

 means self-pleased or contented.

भावार्थ ।

निज कुटुम्बका पालनपोषणही अनेकानेक कष्टोंका कारण है ॥

If there be not the least compassion for the critical condition of his family writhing under the agonies of painful fever of worldly woes and miseries, no learned man will ever condescend to look on the troubled faces of unhappy women ; especially when he sees within his easy reach the banks of the holy Ganges flowing down from the head of Siva, and supplying him with the barks and fruits of the banyan trees, in order to enable him to bear a pious and virtuous life.

PURPORT.—Family affection is generally the root of various troubles to man.

Why is it that the learned are content to live in places other than holy Kāshi (Benares) in whose gardens the subsistence on various kinds of fruits will serve as the hardest penance ; where the wearing of a small piece of cloth over the privities is considered as a suit of fine garments ; where the act of asking alms from door to door is thought as an honest and respectable calling ; and where the approach of death is heartily awaited like that of a good and auspicious event.

According to the Hindus Kāsi (Benares) is one of the seven sacred cities that bring final redemption to the man who may happen to die there. The seven sacred cities thus enumerated :—

“ अयोध्या मथुरा माया काशी काञ्चिर्वन्तिका ।

पुरी द्वारावती चैव सप्तैता मोक्षदायिकाः ॥ ”

“हे भिक्षुक ! तेरे आनेका यह समय ठीक नहीं है क्योंकि इस अवसरपर हमारे स्वामी एकान्तमें निद्रा ले रहे हैं और यदि वह तुमको यहां ठहरा हुआ देखेंगे तो बहुत क्रोध करेंगे” इस प्रकारके वचन जिन धनाढ्यपुरुषोंके द्वारपर सुननेमें आते हैं उनका परित्याग करके हे चित्त ! तू उस विश्वेश्वरके मंदिरमें क्यों नहीं जाता कि, जहांपर पूर्वोक्त प्रकारके कटु वचन बोलनेवाले कोई द्वारपाल नहीं रहते और जहां जानेसे तुझको अपार सुखका लाभ करना सर्वथा सुलभ है ॥ ९६ ॥

Forsaking the guarded doors of the rich where a mendicant is threatened by the watch, and told, “this is not a proper time for thee ; the master of the house is now asleep ; he will be surely angry if he sees thee here,” thou must go straight to the temple of Vishweshwara (विश्वेश्वर), the lord of the universe, whose entrance is not guarded by sentries where thou art never to receive a harsh treatment, and which is sure to give thee the highest amount of happiness and shelter !

It requires no mention that the palace gates of the rich and noble are fast closed upon beggars who are treated very roughly by the guards.

Dear friend, we do not really know what is now to be done by cruel fate who, like a clever potter, forcibly pressing the mind of man as if it were a lump of clay, makes it turn round and round on the wheel of anxieties by the continued motion of the rod of a series of miseries and calamities !

No. 451 (शार्ङ्गधरपण्डति । ४५१), and anonymously in the Subhāṣitāvalī
(सुभाषितावलि) at No. 3137.

The word खल which is here rendered into cruel literally means wicked.

जगत्के अधीश्वर श्रीमहेश्वरमें और जगद्व्यापक श्रीजनार्दनमें
किसी प्रकारका भेद मेरी दृष्टिमें नहीं आता, तथापि मैं यह नहीं
जानता कि, चंद्रशेखर शिवजीकी भक्तिमेंही मेरा चित्त क्योंकर
प्रवृत्त होताहै ? ॥ ९८ ॥

Although I am quite unable to make out any difference between Siva, the lord of the universe, and Vishnu, the omnipresent god of the entire creation ;
yet, my mind is naturally led to the devotion of Siva whose forehead is adorned with a crescent moon.

The word Jagadantarātmā जगदन्तरात्मा literally means the soul of universe. Bhatrihari here says that notwithstanding his incompetency to discern any difference between Viśnu and Śiva his mind is naturally prone to worship Siva. Properly speaking Viśnu is generally worshipped by worldly men, whereas those who renounce the world adore Siva. The Author has himself alluded to this fact in a previous stanza.

हे कामदेव ! बारंवार धनुर्घंकार करके तू अपने हाथको वृथा परिश्रम क्यों दे रहा है ? हे कोकिल ! निरंतर सुंदर कलरवसे तू वृथा बकवाद क्यों कर रहा है ? और हे मुग्धांगना ! अनुरागयुक्त, चतुर, सुंदर, मधुर और चंचल कटाक्षोंसे तू अपने नेत्रोंको व्यर्थ खेद क्यों दे रही है ? क्योंकि हमारा मन तो अब श्रीचंद्रशेखर शिवजीके चरणारविंदोंके ध्यानमृतका पान करनेमें मग्न है ॥ ९९ ॥

Why art thou, oh god of love, uselessly tiring thy hand with continued twangs of thy powerful bow? Why art thou, oh Kokila (कोकिल) trying in vain to disturb the peace of my mind with sweet melodious notes of thy voice? Why dost thou, oh young lady, fruitlessly venture to pierce the heart with thy lovely clever, natural, sweet, and flickering glances? You, should better cease from your vain endeavours; for, now I am earnestly engaged in the nectareous meditation of the feet of Siva whose head is adorned with moon.

नानाप्रकारके भोग सब नाशवान् हैं और वही भोगादिक संसारके आदिकारण हैं । इसलिए हे मनुष्यो ! तुम किस प्रयोजनसे इनके लिए भटक रहे हो सो कुछ समझमें नहीं आता । यदि हमारे कथनपर विश्वास करो तो अनेकानेक आशापाशकी शांतिसे निर्मल हुए चित्तको कामका नाश करनेवाली स्वात्म-प्रकाश आत्मामें निश्चलभावसे लगावो ॥ १०१ ॥

The different kinds of sensual enjoyments are all perishable, but it is they that constitute the world i. e. cause our repeated births and deaths on this globe. Why, then, are people trying their utmost to run after them ? Therefore, if you believe our words, we would advise you to devote yourself to a concentrated meditation of the self-luminous ego that destroys the manifold snares of desires and aspirations, and entirely extirpates the very existence of passion from your hearts.

The poet here advises people to give up the pursuit of worldly pleasures and let their souls be free from the bonds of desires and enter into the meditation of self.

पर्वतकंदरामें निवास करनेवाले और परब्रह्म परमात्माका ध्यान करनेवाले जिन महानुभावोंके आनंदके अश्रुओंको उनकी गोदमें बैठे हुए पक्षीगण निर्भय होकर पान करते हैं वास्तवमें उनही पुण्यात्माओंका जन्म इस संसारमें सफल है, क्योंकि मनमाने भवन, बावड़ी और उपवनमें केलि करनेकी अभिलाषा करनेवाले हमारे समान अन्यान्य मनुष्योंकी आयुष्य तो वृथाही क्षीण होती चलीजाती है ॥ १०२ ॥

Blessed are they whose tears of joy are eagerly drunk by birds, fearlessly lying upon their laps, while living in caves of mountains they are meditating upon the Supreme Light! But, we, on the contrary, are uselessly passing away our days in building airy castles (lit. in imaginary enjoyments of whiling away our time in the pleasant abode of luxurious parks either situated in palatial mansions or on the banks of ideal tanks).

The verse is same as śloka 5 in the Sāntisatoka Part 1. (शान्ति-शतकम् । १ परिच्छेद ५. It is ascribed to भट्टहरि in the शार्ङ्गधरपद्धति at No. 4155.

Our existence is threatened by death and fleeting youth (lit. as fleeting as lightning) by old age ; contentment is destroyed by covetousness after riches ; the happiness of tranquility is disturbed by graceful sports of clever and youthful women ; good merits are subject to the calumnies of the envious ; forests are infested by snakes ; kings are ruined by wicked courtiers ; and prosperity is tarnished by unsteadiness. What is there in this world which is not overpowered by another ?

The term of man's existence is limited to hundred years; half of it is passed in sleep (lit. nights), and half of what remains is taken up by childhood and old-age; while the rest is spent by him in disgraceful occupations like that of serving others, not altogether unmixed with the bitter consequences of diseases, separations, and misfortunes. Where, then is the least possible trace of happiness in a man's life which is as unsteady as waves of water ?

The task undertaken by those that have attained to real spiritual knowledge is undoubtedly the most difficult one, as they entirely forsake the actual enjoyments of sensual pleasures and wealth, and become quite indifferent to their attractions; but we, on the contrary, who have neither enjoyed them in the past, nor possess them at present, nor can say with any certainty of getting them in the coming future, are even unable to give up this nominal possession which exists only in our fond wishes.

The verse is same as sloka 4 in the Śāntiśūlaka Part. I.
(शान्तिशुलकम् । १ परिच्छेदः) .

The idea of the śloka seems to be this:—To give up actual pleasures may be somewhat difficult; but to forsake what we have not should not cause the least difficulty to man.

 रोग शत्रुओंकी भांति देहपर प्रहार करते रहते हैं, और फूटे घड़ेसे
 जलके निकलते रहनेके सदृश आयुष्य भी प्रतिदिन क्षीण होती
 चलीजाती है, परंतु तिसपर भी ये मनुष्य दुष्कर्म करनेसे नहीं डरते यह बड़ेही आश्चर्यकी बात है ॥ १०८ ॥ embraces of their heaving breasts.

The word अवच्छिन्ना literally means, unbroken.

Is it not true that an ascetic has nothing to do with women

The birth of that great Tortoise Koorma (कूर्म) is indeed to be hailed with loud acclamation; for, it is He who has voluntarily offered His back for the support of this heavy and extensive Earth; similarly, the birth of Dhruwa (ध्रुव or the pole star) is also a matter of memorable record; for it is he who remains fixed in the midst of the stellar world incessantly revolving around him. All other creatures are daily born and dead within the interior of this universe without the least notice being ever taken of them; because they pay very little heed in affording the slightest help to their fellow beings, just like the mosquitoes which though possessing wings are unable to fly a great distance either upwards or downwards, and thus end their miserable lives within the Goolar in which they are born.

भोगविलासमें रोगादि उत्पन्न होनेका, सत्कुलमें वंशपरम्पराके
 टूटनेका, द्रव्यमें राजाका, मौनधारणमें दीनताका, पराक्रममें
 शत्रुका, सुंदरतामें जराका, शास्त्रमें विवादका, गुणमें दुर्जनका और
 कायामें मृत्युका भय सर्वदा बना रहताहै। इसलिए हम कहते हैं कि
 इस पृथ्वीतलपर और सब पदार्थ तो भययुक्त हैं परन्तु एक वैराग्यही
 ऐसा है कि जो सब प्रकारके भयसे सर्वथा निर्भय है ॥ ११६ ॥

Enjoyment is subject to disease, respectable family to degradation, and wealth to the fear of being forcibly taken away by kings ; verbal silence is prone to be misconstrued into penury, and physical valour is always afraid of confronting a powerful foe ; beauty is subject to old age, learning to controversy, body to death, and good qualities to the faultfinding spirit of evil persons.
 Thus we see that everything else in this world is indeed subject to danger and fear, but Vairāgya (वैराग्य) or asceticism alone is entirely free from any sort of fear and apprehension

Besides availing myself of the use of a number of abbreviations of ordinary occurrence and everyday use (like those of Ed. for edition, p. for page, Bom. for Bombay, Cal. for Calcutta, No. for number &c. &c.) for brevity's sake I have also ventured to adopt some conventional short forms in the preparation of the present volume. NOTES.

A. 'As to the first place being given to the नीतिशतकम् Kṛiṣṇasāstri Mahābala says: "इह कलु राजपिप्रवरः श्रीभट्टहरिकृष्णलोकसाधके नीतिशतकारवैराग्याख्यशतकत्रयात्मकं ग्रन्थं चिकीर्षुः सदाचरणस्य नीतिज्ञानपूर्वकत्वात्तज्ज्ञानाय प्रथम नीतिशतकमारभमाण इत्यादि."

B. नीति is a very comprehensive term including everything between the sciences of moral and political philosophies. Briefly speaking it is generally used for wisdom and prudence.

C. The word Nitisatakam (नीतिशतकम्) is translated by Prof. Tawney as Hundred stanzas on Ethics and Politics. At page 12 of his preface, he says: "Though the word 'Niti' is usually translated policy, most of the stanzas arranged under this head are rather of an ethical and social character. They inculcate maxims of worldly prudence, and seem designed to teach knowledge of men and individuals, rather than as members of political communities."

I. (a). "As Prof. Max Muller has suggested that Kshapanaka may be a name of Bhartrihari, it may, perhaps, be desirable to point out that in the अनेकार्थचिन्ति मंजरी attributed to a महाशयणक we have the phrase स्वानुबोधकमानाय which seems to bear the same meaning as the phrase we have now discussed (viz, स्वानुबोधकमानाय). The stanza before us, however, is also given as the opening stanza of the Yogavasisthasāra in Aufrecht's Catalogue." (K. T. Telang.)

Here I cannot help dissenting from the view held by the aforesaid learned scholars. First, because no Sanskrit writer has ever said anything about the identity of क्षणिक and भर्तृहरि; and, secondly, because the use of a single phrase स्वातुबोधैकमानाय by both the authors is merely a thing of pure accident which cannot logically lead us to infer that क्षणिक and भर्तृहरि were one and the same person. * Dr. Bhau Dâji who thinks भर्तृहरि as one of the नवरत्न or nine gems probably confounds him with क्षणिक. The nine gems are thus enumerated in the following ślōka

“ धन्वन्तरि क्षणिकामरमिह शंकु वेतालभट्ट घटखर्पर कालिदासाः ।

ख्यातो वराहमिहिरो वृषते समायां रत्नानि वै वररुचि नैव विक्रमस्य ॥ ”

(b). दिक्काल. Needless to say that Indian Science recognises ten दिश's or directions (viz, North, Northeast, East, Southeast, South, Southwest, West, Northwest, above or zenith, and below or nadir), and three काल's or times (viz. past, present, and future).

II. (a). It is a general belief among learned Sanskritists that this stanza furnishes the keynote to the composition of this work, and especially to that of the last Chapter dealing with asceticism; and hence to my mind its appropriate place would have been there. However, as far as it is known to me, no edition of Bhartrihari's Centuries has ever dared transfer it from Nīti to Vairāgya. Consequently, no apology would, I think, be needed for its present position.

(b) There is a tradition that once upon a time Bhartrihari was presented with a wondrous fruit of divine virtues capable of bestowing immortality and everlasting youth upon one who ate it. The king who held his wife even dearer to his own life thought it advisable to give this fruit to his beloved queen. However the queen consort had no love for the magnanimous husband, and so, after receiving the aforesaid gift from the Râja she gave it to her paramour who passed it on to the hands of a prostitute with whom he was in real love. The prostitute who had the highest regard and affection for Bhartrihari came to him, and respectfully placed the miraculous fruit before her sovereign lord. But no sooner were his eyes cast upon it than the wise king did at once recognise it to be the same fruit with which a few days ago he was himself presented by a pious Brahmana. A strong suspicion immediately rose into his mind and he made full and prompt enquiries about the matter. The whole thing being soon clear he became much agrieved and distressed at heart. His affection for mundane objects thereby suffered a great deal and his heart was thus convinced of the utter impossibility of finding sincere love in women upon the surface of this terrestrial globe. This slôka has a covert reference to the aforesaid tradition.

III. ब्रह्मा is one of the Hindu Trinity. His special work is सृष्टिरचना i. e. bringing forth the creation.

V. Strictly speaking, a hare has no horns. To find out hare's horns therefore denotes an utter impossibility. The acquirement of oil from particles of sand, and that of water in the midst of a mirage are likewise impossible.

“On शशविषाणं the following stanza may be quoted :
एष वंध्यामुतो याति खपुष्पं कृतशेखरः । मृगतृष्णामभसिन्नातः शशश्च

(K. T. Telang.)

VI. (a) Sirisha (शिरिष) A species of flower trees. The flower of Sirisha is generally regarded as the type of delicacy by Indian poets.

(b) क्षाराम्बुधि Ocean of salt water. It is worth noting in connection with this that according to Indian mythology the earth is surrounded with seven oceans, viz—(1) क्षीरोदः, (2) इक्षुरसेदः, (3) सुरोदः, (4) वृत्तोदः, (5) दध्योदः, (6) क्षारोदः and (7) सुदोदः or oceans of milk, sugarcandy juice, wine, ghee, curdle, salt and drinkable water.

VII. एकान्तगुणं means productive of extraordinary good एकान्ता अतिशयिता गुणा यस्मिन् तद् । अथातिशयोभरः तीव्रैकान्त-नितान्तानि" इत्यमरः ।

VIII. The late lamented Pandit K. T. Telang says: "I am inclined to take यदाकिं as equal to यदाऽकिं to make distinctly the contrast with the third line." Needless to add that agreeing with him I have here adopted the suggested reading though I have not found it in any of the copies consulted for this edition.

IX. The word निवृण्मरसं which has here been rendered as 'devoid of all juice and taste,' literally means of incomparable taste', i. e. whose disgusting taste can stand no comparison whatever.

X. (a) The Ganges (गंगा). The rise of the Ganges is mythologically traced to the divine feet of Vishnu, whence after flowing through the heavens, she falls upon the head of Śiṣya; and lastly, from the head of Śiva, she descends into the world and flowing down from the heights of the Himālayas empties her waters into the Bay of Bengal. The Ganges is described as having become arrogant in the Rāmāyana (Bālakāṇḍa XLIII., 6 Bomb. Ed.) and this fact will amply account for her successive falls.

(b) "How Bhāgirath got the Ganges to Śiva's head, thence to the Himālaya, thence to earth and thence to the nether world; and how her waters there sanctified the offspring of Sagara is well known. For the whole story see Rāmāyana loci Cit. According to that work (st 75), the Ganges गङ्गाच्छङ्कर विरस्ततो धरणि मागता। शतमुख applies literally to the fall of to the river and to that of the man who is lost all sense of right and wrong; it applies in the sense of a variety of ways." (K. T. Telang)

(c) "Bhagiratha, the son of Dilipa and great-grandson of Sagara, king of Ayodhyā, brought the sacred Ganges from heaven to earth by the aid of Śiva, who is fabled to have received the stream on his head; he then conducted this river to the ocean in order to purify the ashes of his ancestors, the 60,000 sons of Sagara, who were reduced to ashes by Vishnu in the form of Kapila; when they dug through the earth in order to recover the sacrificial horse which had been stolen from their father." (Prof. Tawney.)

XII. The original text of the latter half of the stanza as herein given does not admit of the erroneous interpretation given to it by Mr. Durga Prasad of Lahore who translates it thus: "The superiority of his luck over the lower animals lies in his living without grazing grass. "

XIII. धर्म—Mrs. Annie Besant in her translation of the Bhagwad Gîtâ Says: Dharma is a wide word, primarily meaning the essential nature of a thing; hence the laws of its being, its duty; and it includes religious rites, appropriate to these laws. (Vide The Lord's Song by Annie Besant, p. 21).

XVI. (a) Kalpa (कल्प) generally means the end of the world or the universal destruction. It is a day of Brahma consisting of 1,000 Mahâyugas each of which comprises the aggregate of the four Yugas or ages amounting to 4,320,000 years. The length of a Kalpa is therefore 4,320,000,000 years of mortals. At the end of each Kalpa the existing world is totally annihilated and its place is taken by a new one.

(b) The Hindus believe that knowledge never forsakes its fortunate owner throughout his successive births. Perhaps the belief in the Transmigration of souls does not need any special mention in this place.

On the immortality of knowledge Mr. K. T. Telang has the following.

" Comp. विशाकुलजनवधुरिव जहाति ना जन्म जन्मा ऽ पि &c ॥ and Kumâra I. 30."

XVII. परमार्थ—Artha (अर्थ) is interest or individual interest and Paramârtha (परमार्थ) is the highest interest or the interest of the soul.

XVIII. (a) Hansa (हंस or swan)— This bird is generally believed as being gifted with the peculiar power of separating milk from water when they are mixed together and placed before it.

(b) "The meaning of the stanza is that the swan may be unfortunate, and not have a good dwelling place, but its great inherent qualities will still remain." (K. T. Telang.)

However, to my mind, the real meaning of the stanza is this: "A learned man may be deprived of all his property, but no one can ever wrest from him his literary fame and reputation.

XX. "On गुरुणां गुरुः the commentator has the following ध्रुवगुरुः सर्वविद्यासंस्पूर्णप्राज्ञं प्रष्टुं शक्यन्ति स प्राज्ञो गुरुणामपि गुरुः ॥ अथ च गृणाति हितं सुप्रदिशति इति गुरु रिति गुरुपदव्याख्यानमतो हितं कर्त्री विद्यैव. This is too farfetched and not free from difficulties. गुरुणां गुरुः is simply greatest of the great." (K. T. Telang.)

To me गुरुणां गुरुः is as clear as anything. I take it in its ordinary sense of Guru of Gurus (teacher of teachers) or the best teacher. गुरु is feminine. See Pānini IV. I. 44.

Kṛiṣṇa Sāstri Mahābala also explains it as विद्यैव गुरुणा सुप्रदेष्टुणां गृणाति हितं सुप्रदिशतीति गुरु रूपं दृष्टी ।

Prof. Tawney has left out the clause altogether.

XXI. To understand the clause 'ज्ञातिश्चेदनलन किम्' more clearly let us see what the Sanskrita commentator says upon it : ज्ञातिः स्वजातिः सम्प्रदायस्ति चेदनलेनाग्निना किम्-अभिकृतं तापादिकं सैव करिष्यति ॥

Mr. Durga Prasad translates it thus: he needs no fire to ruin him who has hosts of relations to support.

XXIV. (a) Here is a play upon the word रससिद्धाः which means (1) रसं पुं पारदादिषु सिद्धाः सज्जा इत्यर्थः as well as

(2) रसेषु शृङ्गारादिषु सिद्धाः पूर्णाः कुशला इति । “रससिद्ध—perfect in the rasas or sentiments, masters of style, capable of ruling the passions and feelings of men.” (K. T. Telang.)

(b). Rasâs (रसाः) The nine poetical styles (or Indian muses) as enumerated by the poets are : (1) the Śringâra or Erotic ; (2) the Hâsyâ or Comic ; (3) the Karunâ or Elegiac ; (4) the Vira or Heroic ; (5) the Raudra or Tragic ; (6) the Bhayankara or Melancholic ; (7) Vaibhatsa or Satiric ; (8) the Sânta ; or Didactic ; and (9) the Adbhuta or Sensational.

XXVI. Mr. Durga Prasada is far from being right and correct in translating the last line of the stanza. See Durga Prasad's English Translation of Bhartrihari's Nitisataka. Para 23.

XXVIII. Asidhârâ vow (असेवारव्रत) A vow to stand on the sharp edge of a sword ; or a vow to keep constant company with a young and handsome woman without ever dreaming of conjugal love.

XXX. The point of the stanza is not that the ‘pariah’ is not ashamed even to eat the fleshless bone of the cow (as Prof. Tawney seems to conclude) but the point is really this that the dog is not ashamed even to eat with great relish a piece of dry bone which has nothing at all to attract his attention.

“The poet's meaning certainly is that a special impurity attaches to eating the flesh of the cow. But Babu Rajendra Lâl Mitra has shown that this notion is of very recent origin. It does not appear to have been prevalent in time of Bhavabhuti, who is generally placed in the eighth century. So that this stanza seems to have been written at a far later date than that assigned by Prof. Lassen to the majority of Bhartrihari's poems. " (Prof. Tawney.)

It will not be quite clear to the reader why have I quoted at length the above note of Prof. Tawney. But I will not tax his patience to tell the plain truth in the smallest possible space. There is a word गोः in the text, and this little monosyllable has furnished the learned professor with a fine clue for the solution of the much debated question of Bhartrihari's period. However I would beg to warn the general public to take it for what it is worth. Because it needs not be pointed out that in the first place the word गोः is put in merely for the sake of metre. If we take out गोः and put in some other word of equal measure (no matter, it qualifies अस्मि or not) the meaning of the śloka will remain substantially the same without losing the least and slightest force.* Secondly, the assumption that the notion of attaching a special impurity to eating the flesh of the cow is of later origin than the time of Bhavabhūti, is quite unfounded. The sanctity of the cow is as old as the Vedas. The Rāmāyana and the Mahābhārata have numerous passages in praise of the sacred cow. " Kālidāsa in his Raghuvansā says that Dilīpa the renowned ancestor of Rāmchandra, preferred giving his own life to seeing नन्दिनी (the sacrificial cow of वसिष्ठ) devoured by a lion. †

* Mr. K. T. Telang has found कम् to exist for गोः in no less than seven different copies of the śatakas which he has consulted for his edition of भर्तृहरिः (Vide p. 9. B. S. Series No. XI). The copies of the Hitopadeśa, Panchatantra. and the subhāshitāvali where the verse is quoted have also got के instead of गोः ।

‡ " सत्त्वं मदीयेन शरीरवृत्तिं देहेन निर्वर्तयितुं प्रसीद । दिनावसानां शुक्रबालवत्सा विसृज्यतां धेनुरियं महर्षेः ॥ "

See also Mr. K. T. Telang's note at p. xii Bombay Sanskrit Series No. xi.

XXXII. The radical meaning of the word संसार is also equivalent to what is always in motion संसरतीति संसारः ।

“परिवर्तिनि—revolving, rotating. The allusion is to the ever-recurring birth and death in this world. पुनरपि जननं पुनरपि मरणं पुनरपि जननी जग्रे शयनम् are familiar verses to the same effect. They are ascribed to Sankarâchârya. See Kâvya Sangraha 35.” (K. T. Telang.)

XXXIV. (a) Râhu (रहू)-Name of a demon, son of Viprachitti and Simhikâ.

(b) For the story of Râhu's vengeance on the sun and the moon, refer to the following note of Mr. F. S. Growse, from his Translation of the Râmâyana of Tulsidâsa vol. III :-The demon Râhu having disguised himself as one of the gods, succeeded in securing a draught of the nectar which the gods had churned out of the ocean. The sun and the moon, who had detected the impostor, gave information to Vishnu, who thereupon cut off the monster's head and two of his forearms. As he could not rob him of the immortality that the nectar had conferred, the severed head and tail were metamorphosed into heavenly bodies, under the names of Râhu and Ketu, or the ascending and descending nodes; of which the former still wreaks vengeance on the sun and the moon by now and then swallowing them.

XXXV. (a) Sesha (शेष)-Name of the celebrated serpent King Bâsukî. He is represented as supporting the entire world on his thousand heads or hoods Cf. “ब्रह्माण्डकुम्भकारं भुजगाकारं जनार्दनं नौमि । स्फुरेयत्कणचक्रे धरा शरावश्रियं बहति” (गोवर्धनस्थायीसप्तशती १७).

(b) Kamathapati (कमठपति). The lord of tortoises. Vishnu is represented as to have assumed the form of a tortoise in order to support the serpent King Bāsuki together with the entire world upon his stalwart back. Cf. “यो षत्तेशेषनागं तदनुवमुमतीं स्वर्गपातालयुक्तां युक्तां सर्वैः समुद्रैर्हिमगिरिकनकप्रस्थमुल्लयैर्नगेन्द्रैः । एतद्ब्रह्माण्डं मत्स्यामृतं धरमदशं भाति वंशे मुरारिः पायाद्ब्रह्म कूर्मदेहः प्रकटितमहिमा साधवः कामरूपी ॥”

XXXVI. It is told that the mountains were formerly furnished with wings by which they were enabled to fly from one place to another. Every thing whether animate or inanimate being therefore afraid of being crushed to pieces by their fall, Indra was led to make a vow to deprive them all of this valued privilege. When he began to cut off their wings by his Bajra many had to save their lives by flying into the ocean. Maināka, the son of the Himālayas was one of those who retained their wings by drowning themselves into the ocean who kindly gave them the desired refuge. This story is told in the Sundarakāṇḍ of the Rāmāyana.

XXXVII. (a) इन्कान्न-Sun-gem. “A king of crystal cool to the touch, and supposed to possess fabulous properties, because like a glass lens it gave out heat when exposed to the rays of the sun.”

(Monier Williams.)

(b) Mark the word pāda (पाद) in the text which means both foot and ray.

XXXVIII. (a) "The idea of the last line finds frequent expression in Sanskrit Literature; तेजसा सह जातानां वयः कुत्रोपयुज्यते or Kālidāsa's तेजसां हि न वयः समीक्षते, or Bhavabhūti's गुणाः पुज्यास्थानं गुणिषु न च लिंगं न च वयः are other wellknown instances." (K. T. Telang.)

(b) Teja-(तेजः) The word is susceptible of a wide range of interpretations. It is thus defined by Bharata the father of Sanskrit Drama :

अधिक्षेपापमानादेः प्रयुक्तस्य परेण यत् । प्राणत्ययेऽप्यसहन् तत्तेजः समुदाहृतम् ॥ Sec Nāṭyaśāstram XXII. 39.

XL. Mr. Charles Wilkins' interpretation of the verse runs as follows:—

"Those faculties are not injured." This is a mere saying. "That judgement is unimpaired." That also is but an expression; for the moment a man is deprived of the comfort of riches, he is quite another. Is not this curious? See Fables and Proverbs from the Sanskrit. Morley's Universal Library No. 30 p. 70.

XLVI. Kalpalatā (कल्पलता) a creeper of Indra's paradise. This heavenly plant is supposed to be able to grant all desires and hence it is also called as the wish-yielding tree.

XLIX. Meru (मेरु) see Note to stanza LXXX (a) (Nīti).

L. Chātaka (चातक) a Species of partridge. Name of a bird which is supposed to live only on rain drops.

"The Chātaka is fabled never to drink except it be such drops as fall in the month of October, when the sun is in the same longitude as orcturus (Swâti), a time of the year when a shower is a very rare occurrence. "The same precious drops if they fall into the sea are transmuted into pearls." (Mr. Growse).

Allusion is made to the latter tradition in stanza LXVII. (Niti.)

LIII. It is a general belief among the people of India that there exists a certain species of snakes which bear or carry invaluable gems upon their hoods.

LVIII. It must be understood that the stanza refers to the service of evil masters.

LXIV. See note to stanza XXVIII (Niti).

LXVII. See Note to stanza L (Niti).

LVIV. "The idea of the stanza is that all should make their choice of the alternatives stated. The two cannot be joined. Cf. also the quotation at Saraswatikanthâbharnna, p. 69. (Barooa's Ed.)" (Telang).

LXXIV. (a) Padma (पद्म) a species of lotus that expands in the day and closes at night.

(b) Kairava (कैरव) is the lily that blossoms in the night and fades at sunrise.

LXXVI. "This stanza gives a moral aspect to the physical phenomenon of boiling milk being prevented from overflowing by water being thrown upon it."
(K. T. Telang.)

LXXVII. Keshava (केशव)—One who sleeps in water. It is a name of Vishnu (विष्णु).

(b) For the lying of refugee mountains into the womb of the ocean see our Note to stanza XXXVI. supra.

(c) Badavānala (बडवानल)—The submarine fire is represented in mythology as a being with a body of flame and the head of a mare which sprang from the thighs of the partiarth Urva and fell into the ocean.

Badvānala is a compound word meaning mare-fire.

(d) Samvarataka (संवर्तक)—a species of rains powerful enough to bring about the universal destruction by incessant downpour of heavy showers.

(e) " According to Hindu notions the fires that are to roll every thing together and destroy the world at the time of universal destruction, are concealed beneath the sea." See Prof. Tawney's Three centuries of Bhartrihari p. 31 Cal. Ed.

LXXIX. Tribhuvana (त्रिभुवन) The three spheres of the universe, comprising the earth, heaven, and hell.

LXXX. (a) Hemagiri (हेमगिरि) or Semuru (सुमेरु) The sacred mountain Meru. This celebrated golden mountain is supposed to be situated in the centre of the world, and around which the sun is said to make his daily revolutions.

(b) Rajatagiri (रजतगिरि) or Kailāsa (कैलास)—is the name of a mountain, which forms the northwestern peak of the Himālayas and the residence of Shiva and Kuvera. This peak of the abode of Ice is supposed to be made of silver. The name silver-peak might possibly have been given to it on account of its silver-like appearance owing to the fact of its remaining covered over with ice all the year round.

(c) Malaya (मलय)—" Name of a mountain range in Southern India, abounding in sandal trees. Poets usually represent the breeze from the malaya mountain as wafting the odour of sandal trees and other plants growing thereon, which peculiarly affects persons who are smit with love." (Prof. V. S. Apte). Dr. Kielhorn says that Malaya is the name of a mountainous range on the Western coast of the Indian peninsula on which the best sandal wood trees grow.

(d) Kunkôla (कङ्कोल) a kind of plant " कोलकम् । कङ्कोलकं कोशफलम् " इत्यमरः । The commentator says कोलकं-कङ्कोलकं-कोशफलं त्रीणि कङ्कोल " गवला " इति ख्यातस्य ।

(e) Nimba (निम्ब) is a kind of large tree very common in India. Its name is ordinary Hindustâni is Neema. Its bark, twigs, and leaves are all very bitter of taste.

(f) Kutaja (कुटज)-It is a kind of forest plant of soury taste. Its Latin name as given by the Bhâsâkâra of the Abhinavanighantu is pongamia glabrâ. See page 102 of अभिनवनिघंटु by Pandit Dattarâma Chaube.

LXXXI (a) The churning of the ocean is one of the common place of Hindu poetry. With mount Mandara as a churning stick, the great serpent Bâsuki as a rope, and Narain himself in tortoise form as the pivot on which to work, the gods and demons combined to churn the Milky ocean. " (Mr. Growse).

(b) The fourteen jewels churned out of the ocean are thus enumerated in the popular stanza of the Mangalâshataka which is attributed to Kâlidâs लक्ष्मीः

कौस्तुभं पारिजातकं सुरा धन्वन्तरि श्वन्त्रमा । गावः कामदुधाः सुरेश्वरगजो रम्भादि
देवाङ्गनाः । अश्वः सप्तमुखो विषं हरिधनुः शंखोऽमृतं चाम्बुधे, रत्नानीह चतुर्दश प्रातिदिनं कुर्युः सदा मङ्गलम् ॥ i. e. they are (1) the goddess of wealth or beauty, (2) a gem worn by Vishnu, (3) the tree of paradise, (4) wine, (5) the physician of the gods, (6) the moon, (7) the cow of plenty, (8) Indra's elephant, (9) the heavenly nymphs, (10) the seven mouthed horse, (11) poison, (12) the bow of Vishnu, (13) the sacred conch and (14) nectar.

LXXXIV. Yuga (युग) An age of the world.
The yugas are four in number viz, the Satyayuga
(the golden age), the Tretâyuga (the silver age), the Dwâparayuga (the brazen age) and the Kaliyuga (the iron age). The duration of each is said to be respectively 1,728,000; 1,296,000; 864,000; and 420,000 years of men. It is also supposed that the regularly descending length of the Yugas represents a corresponding physical and moral deterioration in the people who live during each age.

LXXXV. Daiva (दैव) “ पूर्वं जन्म कृतं कर्म त दैव मिति कथ्यते ”

LXXXVIII. (a) Vrihaspati (बृहस्पति) He is the regent of the planet Jupiter, and preceptor of the gods.”
(Porf. Tawney's Bhartṛihari, p. 35).

(b) Airāvata (ऐरावत) is the name of Indra's elephant. It is one of the fourteen jewels. See note to stanza LXXXI. (b). (Niti)

LXXXIX. Karma (कर्म) Here man's fate or the certain consequence of the acts done in a former life.

XC. " The fact of the tree being the ताल (Palm) adds to the force of the lines as it gives little or no shade. " (K. T. Telang).

XCIII. (a) I think there is no necessity of pointing out that the Karîra bush has no leaves all the year round, that the owl is doomed not to see in day light and that the Châtaka is believed to drink no water except the drops of October showers.

(b) Karîra (करीर) a thorny plant in the woods eaten by camels and goats. It remains leafless at all seasons of the year.

(c). Châtaka (चातक) See note to stanza L. (Nîti)

XCV. (a) It needs not be told that Brahmâ is believed by the Hindus to be the Creator of the universe, Vishnu to have assumed the ten incarnations and Mahâdeva to be an ascetic. The ten incarnations of Visnu are those of Fish, Tortoise, Boar, Man-lion, Vâman (Dwârf), Parasûrâma, Râmachandra, Krishna, Buddha and Kalki.

(b) The author in common with a large majority of Indian poets evidently believes that it is the Sun who revolves round the Earth ; but, on the contrary, scientific men both before and after him have proved it beyond doubt that the Earth revolves round the Sun and not vice versa.

(c) " ब्रह्माण्डमाण्डोदरे " is a common expression. Comp. Viracharita, p. 17, or Sahityadarpana, p. 97. The allusion is to the story of Brahmâ coming out of the primordial egg, the two halves of which then became Heaven and Earth. See Manu, 1st. 11, 12, 13 and Matsya Purâna. II., 28, et seq. Prof. Tawney (Indian Antiquary, Vol IV., p., 264) refers to Aristophanes for the same idea. (See his Bhartrihari, p. 38)"

(K. T. Telang).

XCIX. अविपत्तेः is rendered by Dr. Peterson as "to the bitter end."

C. (a) Arka (अर्क) plants generally abound in wild growth on the Indian soil.

(b) Kôdrava (कोद्रव) is the paspalum frilmentaceum or Scrobiculatum which bears a small grain of inferior quality, eaten only by the poor.

(c) "कर्मभूमिः This world is often so called. The idea is somewhat similar to that of Bishop Butler, who calls this a world for man's probation. See Râmâyan (Bomb. Ed.) Ayôdhyâkânda, CIX, 28 (p. 205), कर्मभूमिमिमां प्राप्य कर्तव्यं कर्म यच्छुभम्. See also Muir, V., 325 (Ed. 1870), कर्मभूमिरियं ब्रह्मफलभूमिरसौ मता which fixes the meaning precisely.....The idea expressed in the several analogies in the first three lines is that of good things misapplied. Thus तिलखली is a very worthless stuff to be cooked in a pot of the Vaidurya-precious stone with sandal wood fuel; a golden ploughshare similarly is misapplied if used in digging up the ground for the अर्क root which is of little value, and so is a collection of कर्पूर trees if it is cut down to make a hedge around a field where कोद्रव is grown, this being a very coarse and poor sort of grain. This is exactly the idea of the fourth line also. The opportunities given by birth in this world are lost when तपस is not practised. The अर्थ is mentioned in the familiar proverb “अर्के चेन्मधु विन्देते किमर्थं पर्वतं व्रजेत्” (K. T. Telang).

CI. (a) Meru (मेरु)—See Note to stanza LXXX (a) (Nīti).

(b) “A man may do the most difficult and dangerous things in order to do what is fated not to happen or to avoid what is fated to happen. But he will fail.”
(K. T. Telang).

CIX. Meru (मेरु)—See Note (a) to stanza LXXX. (Nīti).

ŚRINGARASĀTAKA.

A. As to the second place being given to the Śringārasātaka Kṛṣṇa Sāstri Mahābala says:—

श्रीमद्राजर्षिप्रवरो मर्तुहरिः शृङ्गाररससेवनमपि नीतिपूर्वकमेवं कर्तव्यं न तद्विरुद्धमिति सूचयन् प्रथमं नीतिज्ञानाय नीतितत्त्वकं कृत्वा ततः शृङ्गाररसस्य पारिणामे वैराग्यजनक-त्वात्कचिद्देश्यत्वेन कचिदुपादेश्यत्वेनादौ तं वर्णयित्वा पश्चाद्वैराग्य वर्णयिष्यामीति मनसि निधाय शृङ्गारशतकं प्रारम्भसुरित्यादि—

B. Śringāra (शृङ्गार) — “पुनर्योरन्योन्यरक्तयो रातप्रकृतिः शृङ्गारः।”

See रुद्रट्टकृतकाव्यालङ्कारः XII--5. It is thus defined in the Rasaratnahāra of Sivarāma :

“स्त्रीपुंसयोरमिथो रागवृद्धिः शृङ्गार उच्यते ” See श्रीत्रिपाठि शिवराम प्रणीत रसरत्नहार : ६ ।

According to another authority Śringāra is defined as follows:—

रम्यदेशकलाकालवेषभोगादिसेवनैः । प्रमोदात्मारतिः सैव यूनोरन्योन्य रक्तयोः॥
प्रहृष्यमाणा शृङ्गारो मधुराङ्गविचेष्टितैः । अयोगो विप्रयोगश्च संभोगश्चेति स त्रिधा ॥

See Sāhityasārasaṅgraha, by Moreshwara Rām-chandra Kāle, B. A., p.55.

Śringāra is derived thus : शृङ्गं हि मन्मथोद्वेदस्तदागमनहेतुकः । पुरुषप्रमदाभूमिः शृङ्गार इति गीयते ।

To Sum up all these, we have to say that Śringāra or the Erotic deals with the riss, growth and development of mutual love and attachment between man and woman.

I. (a) Brahmā, Vishnu and Siva form the Hindu Trinity. Brahmā is generally known as the Creator, Vishnu, the Protector, and Siva the Destroyer of the world.

(b) Kusumáyudha (कुसुमायुध)-Name of the god of love, so called on account of the fact of his weapon being made of flowers.

II. Bhâva (भाव)-Generally speaking Bhâvas are the different kinds of feelings and emotions that rise into the minds of women at the time of seeing youthful persons of the opposite sex. In dramatic science or in poetic compositions generally, Bhâvas are either (स्थायिनः) primary or (व्यभिचारिन्) subordinate.

According to Bharata वागङ्गसत्त्वोपेतान्काव्यार्थान्भावयन्तीति भावाः । तत्राष्टौ भावाः स्थायिनः । त्रयस्त्रिंशद्व्यभिचारिणः । अष्टौ सात्विकाः । एवमेते काव्यरसमिव्यक्तिहेतव एकोनपञ्चाशद्भावाः प्रत्यवगन्तव्याः । एभ्यश्च सामान्यगुणयोगेन रसा निष्पद्यन्ते । See भरतमुनि प्रणीतनाट्यशास्त्रम् । ७ अध्यायः ।

Mr. Moreshwara Râmchandra Kâle says :— Bhâva is the complete pervasion of the heart by any feeling whether of pleasure or of pain arising from the objects under sight. It is derived from भावन or वासन scent i. e. that which gives its own smell to other things &c. See Moreshwara R. Kâle's Sâhityasâra Sangraha. p. 44.

III. Lilâ (लीला)-Sportive manner. Lilâ is one of the three physical embellishments of a young lady. The other two are Bhâva (भाव) and Hâva (हाव).

IV. Diśa (दिशः)-The ten directions of the world. See our Note to stanza 1 (b). Nîti.

VI. Vilâsa (विलास)-Conversation with a smiling face. Also refer to Note on stanza C. infra.

X. (a) Abala (अबल) means powerless. It is a special designation of women. Compare the use of the epithet 'weaker sex' in English.

(b) Indra (इन्द्र) was smitten with love at the sight of Ahalya (अहल्या) the wife of Gautama (गौतम). The story is told both in the Bhāgawata and the Rāmāyana.

XI. मकरध्वज is the god with the emblem of makara (मकर), a kind of sea animal generally a fish. It is an epithet of Cupid.

XII. The real beauty of the śloka lies in the nice pun upon the words संयमिनः, श्रुतेः, द्विजानां, and मुक्तानां. Also see our foot-note to the stanza.

Besides the words explained at the foot-note to this verse, the word परंगते is also susceptible of two interpretations : (1) have gone to the extreme end of, and (2) have mastered completely.

XIII. (a) Mugdha (मुग्धा) is a special epithet applied to young ladies blooming into youth. It is thus defined by a well known writer on Sringāra—
मुग्धा नववयः कामा रतौ वामा मृदुः कुधि ।

(b) The exquisite beauty of the stanza lies in the ingenious play on the word गुणैः which equally stands for (1) bow-strings, and (2) mental, moral and personal qualifications.

XIV. The learned editors of the Subhāshitā-vali (Bombay Sanskrit Series No. XXXI) remark on this couplet that the old reading ताराखीन्दुषु introduces the sun, which has no business here. However I would like to adhere to the reading ताराखीन्दुषु, because the thought would thereby be considerably stronger and more beautiful and poetical, inasmuch as one away from his lady love is naturally inclined to take the world to be full of darkness both in day and night. Night is really dark in comparison with day, and there is neither poetry nor beauty in alluding to its gloom. The sense would be much weakened by confining the idea of darkness to night with which it is always associated. The line “तद्विलेखराज्यकारितमिदं दग्धं दिनं कल्पितं” in Kālidāsa’s Vikramaurvaśī supports our view by keeping the word दिनं in the stanza.

XV. Here too we find a very ingenious pun upon the words (उद्धृतः, तरले, चले, राग,—and मन्त्रस्था which may either be taken in their in their literal or secondary senses.

XVI. In this stanza the author has availed himself of the double meanings of the words गुरु, चन्द्र, भास्वन, and शनैश्चर, which respectively mean both Jupiter and weighty, moon and bright, sun and luminous, and Saturn and slowmoving. Without fully understanding the double meanings of these words, the poet’s exquisite comparison of woman with the well-known planetary group will be quite obscure and nonsense.

XVIII. (a) Arya (आर्य)—Generally speaking it means an Aryan. But in its special sense it is confined to an inhabitant of Aryāvarta or India proper, in contradistinction to the aboriginies. In Sanskrit compositions आर्य is usually applied to a man of learning and respectable family. Here it stands for a learned man. Pandit Vaidyanātha in his Uddāharan Chandrikā (उदाहरणचन्द्रिका) when commenting on this stanza explains आर्याः by विद्वांसः i. e. learned men.

(b) Vaidyanathā in his Uddāharanchandrika (उदाहरणचन्द्रिका) after explaining the stanza adds: अत्र वाच्यः संशयः । व्यङ्ग्यस्तु शान्तं शृण्वेयं न गतं निश्चय इति स्वरूपवैलक्षण्यम् ।

XIX. Tatwagyāna (तत्त्वज्ञान)-knowledge of the Essence of things.

XX. (a) Here again we meet the same ingenious play upon the words चन्द्रकान्त, महानील and पद्मराग which respectively mean both moonstone or moonlike sapphire or dark-blue and ruby or rosy.

(b) It may be noted with pleasure that Varāhamihira goes even a step further when he asserts that it is the women who adorn gems, and not the gems that adorn women; because women can enslave the hearts of men without the help of gems, but gems can never be said to possess a like power without the company of women's handsome persons. The original text runs as follows:—

रत्नानि विभूषयन्ति योषा भूष्यन्ते वनिता न रत्नकान्त्या ।

चेतो वनिता हरन्त्यरत्ना नो रत्नानि विनाऽङ्गनाऽङ्गसङ्गात् ॥

Vide वाराहीसंहिता । LXXII. 2.

XXI. (a) Vāmanayanā (वामनयना)-Women are generally so called on account of their natural habit of looking at men with side glances.

(b). Dr. J. Taylor in his translation of the Prabodhchandrōdaya (प्रबोधचन्द्रोदयः) renders the verse as follows:—

When a women by deceitful glances penetrates the tender heart of a man, what power does she not possess ! She facinates him, she sports with him, teases him, frowns on him, fills him with eager desires and mocks him.

XXII. In this stanza the poet speaks of a delicate lady separated from her lover. Every word is so dexterously put as to successfully impress the extraordinary tenderness of her delicate frame. Not to speak of the sun, she is even unable to bear the rays of the moon. She walks very slowly, her paces are guided by her feminine strength, she stops and takes rest in the shade of trees, and in order to protect her uncommonly delicate face from the effects of the moon's rays she draws up her veil against them.

XXIV. Swarga (स्वर्ग) is heaven or Indra's paradise.

XXVIII. (a) Govinda in his Kâvyapradipa and Vaidyanâth in his Udâharanachandrikâ say that इतं is अधिकं i. e. more than justified by the छन्द of the stanza.

(b) Under the particulars in which the stanza is cited by Sârngadhara in his Sârngadharapaddhati one would be led to agree with him in taking the verse to be the joint production of शीलाम्भारिका and भोजराजः— I shall therefore prefer to read इदमपि for यदपिच in the 3rd charana.

XXXII. Mâna (मान) is anger excited by jealousy (especially in women).

XXXIII. (a) Henceforward the poet begins to describe the six well-known seasons of the year:

viz, (1) Vasanta or Spring, (2) Grishma or Summer, (3) Varshâ or Rains, (4) Sharat or Autumn, (5) Hima or Winter, (6) Shishira or Early Spring respectively giving 5, 3, 6, 1, 1, and 2 stanzas to each of them.

(b) मघौ=चैत्रे । “स्याचैत्रे चैत्रको मघुः” इत्यमरः । As it (मघु) is one of the two months of Spring, it here stands for the whole of that lovely season.

XXXV. (a) चैत्र is the first month of the Vikrami Samvat.

(b) It may be confidently noted here that the description we find in the stanzas numbered 35, 38, 39, 40 and 48 very strongly corroborates the belief that their author must either be a king or one well conversant with kingly surroundings.

XXXVI. (a) Pātala (पाटल) “is the Bignonia or Stereospermum Snecoleum, a large tree common in South India, with dark dull crimson, exquisitely fragrant flowers.” (Mr. Growse).

(b) श्रीखण्डशैल is another name of Malayâchala. According to Prof. Apte it is one of the seven principal chains of mountains in India. It is most probably to be identified with the southern portion of the Ghâts running from the south of Mysore, and forming the eastern boundary of Travancore. See also our note to stanza LXXX (c) in the Nītisataka.

XLI. (a) The poet here compares the rainy season to a youthful woman. All the attributes are so chosen as to qualify both the rainy season and a young lady.

(b) Jāti (जाति or जाती)—A species of flowerplant known as the Jasmine.

XLII. (a) Kutaja (कुतज)—See Note to stanza LXXX (f) in the Nītisataka.

(b) Kadamba (कदम्ब)—A kind of large tree with beautiful fragrant flowers. It blossoms in the rains. Hence it is spoken of by poets as budding at the roaring of thunder clouds.

XLIV. Ketaki (केतकी)—Name of a plant usually growing near water. The scent of its flowers usually called Sirā is very strong and lasting. It usually puts forth its blossoms in the beginning of the rainy season.

XLV. Nabhas (नभस् or श्रावण) is the fifth month of the Vikrami Samvat. श्रावण together with भाद्रपद the month next following it, forms the rainy season.

XLIX Vita (विट)—Generally speaking a paramour or voluptuary or sensualist. In dramatic literature Vita is the companion of a prince or dissolute young man, or of a courtizan. He is described as being skilled in the arts of singing, music and poetry, and as a parasite on familiar terms with his associate to whom he nearly serves the purpose of Vidūshaka (विदूषक).

L. सोष्कार is the making of an inarticulate sound by drawing in the air between the closed lips.

LI. अन्तस्तत्त्व is the all pervading essence of things i. e. Brahma—

LII. Vedānta (वेदान्त) literally means the end of the Vedas. Vedānt refers to that system of philosophy which deals with the ultimate end of the Vedas, teaches the pantheistic creed of the Hindus, and preaches the profound doctrine that Brahma is the only Truth and that the world is a mere delusion.

LIV. Lôkas (लोक)—The lôkas (worlds or spheres) are fourteen in number, seven above and seven below. See note to stanza XXII (c) in the Vairâgyasataka.

LVII. The Apsarâs or the heavenly nymphs are one of the fourteen jewels that were churned out of the ocean. Also refer to our Note to stanza LXXXI (b) in the Nitisataka. The radical meaning of the word अप्सरा is a dweller of water, hence a Naiad. The names of the principal Apsaras are उर्वशी, मेनका, रम्भा, तिलोत्तमा &c &c.

LIX. Dr. Peterson in his note on stanza 2246 of the Subhâshitâvali says that this verse is quoted in the Hitôpadesa (हितोपदेशः) but the verse is nowhere to be found in that work. Strange it is that it cannot be traced out even in his own edition of the Hitôpadesa.

LX. Brahmâ is the Creator. See also Note on stanza. I (a) supra.

LXI. Pancheshu (पञ्चेषु)—Name of the god of love, so called on account of his being represented as the holder of five arrows.

Cf.—“अरविन्दमशोकं च कूर्तं च नभर्मल्लिका । नीलोत्पलं च पद्मेते पञ्च बाणाः प्रकीर्तिताः ॥ ” or “संमोहनेग्मादनी च शोषणस्तापनस्तथा । स्तम्भनयेति कामस्य पञ्च बाणाः प्रकीर्तिताः ॥ ”

In other words the five arrows of Cupid are thus enumerated by poets either to be the flowers of the lotus, asôka, mango, Jasmine and blue lotus; or the acts of ravishing, maddening, drying up (or emaciating) heating (or paining) and stupifying.

LXIV. At page 74 of the Bombay Sanskrit Series No. 1, Dr. G. Bühler, C.I.E., has the following note on this stanza: नमीकृता मुण्डिता; these two words describe the Jain and Baudha ascetics—रक्तपटीकृता, '(have been dressed in red rags.' Red clothes are also the marks of Smârta ascetics. कपालिका: 'skull wearers.' This is the name of certain disreputable worshippers of Devi, see H. H. Wilson's Works, Vol. 1., pp 21 and 264. The verse satirically represents asceticism as a consequence of the anger of Cupid.

LXV. (a) Viśvāmitra (विश्वामित्र)—Name of an illustrious sage, who though born a Kshatriya attained ब्रह्मत्व by virtue of his hard penances. He was smitten with love at the sight of Menakā (मेनका) who was sent by Indra to spoil his rigid devotions. Menakā bore him a daughter afterwards known as Shakuntalā the story of whose love and marriage with Duśhyanta forms the subject of Kālidāsa's immortal drama entitled "Sakuntalā."

(b) Parāśara (पराशर)—Name of a celebrated sage, the father of Vyāsa, the well-known compiler of the Vedās. Parāśara is said to have fallen in love with a fisherwoman named Satyavati who bore him the celebrated Vyāsa before her marriage to Santanu. Parāśara is the author of a smṛiti called after him Parāśarasmriti.

(c) Vindhya (विन्ध्य)—Name of the great mountainous range known as the Vindhya mountains separating the Dekkan from India proper.

LXVII. (a) Siddha (सिद्ध) A semi-divine being supposed to be of great purity and holiness, and said to be particularly characterized by eight supernatural faculties called Siddhis.

"The miraculous powers that can be acquired by perfect saints or Siddhas, are reckoned as eight in number, and are called, Animā, Mahimā, Garimā, Laghimā, Prāpti, Prākāmya, Ishitwa, and Wāshitwa. The words denote the faculty 1st of becoming infinitely small; 2nd of becoming infinitely great, 3rd of becoming infinitely heavy; 4th of becoming infinitely light; 5th of obtaining whatever one wishes; 6th of doing whatever one wishes; 7th of absolute supremacy; and 8th of absolute subjugation."

(Mr. Growse).

(b) हनुमन् is the bull of Hara i. e. Śiva. Its most popular name is Nandi (नन्दी), and it is the vehicle of Śiva.

LXX. नरक is hell or the region of Pluto. Mythology believes in numerous hells, and hence the phrase नरकशत &c. in the text. Each peculiar hell has its peculiar punishments, horrors, and pains especially designed for the particular class of sinners that are doomed to enter it. Different authorities give different numbers of hells. But their number is popularly confined to twenty-one.

LXXI. (a) Sringāra (शृङ्गार)-See our Note B. supra.

(b) Chakōra (चकोर)-The chakora or partridge is supposed to be very fond of looking at the resplendent moon. It is therefore generally spoken of as drinking the mellifluous nectar of the lunar rays.

LXXII. "Inflamed by passion, even wise men beholding woman, who is the daughter of impurity, address her in tender language: 'O Cahrmer, thy large eyes are like the water-lily; thy lips are full and round; thy protuberant breasts touch each other; thy beautiful mouth resembles the lotus and elegant are thine eyebrows'. Viewing her in this manner, their passions are inflamed, they are transported with desire and follow the dictates of lust". See Dr. J. Taylor's Prabôdhachandrôdaya, p. 50.

LXXVI. (a) स्वर्गद्वार is gate of heaven to the Indra's paradise.

(b) नरकपुर region of hell. Also refer to our Note on stanza LXX. supra.

LXXVIII. Here again we have a very ingenious play upon the word रम which equally means red colour and affection.

LXXX. In this stanza the poet has given us a very graphic description of the fickleness of woman's love.

LXXXI. On हृदयं मुष्टिभि रेव ताड्यते Dr. Keilhorn remarks as follows:-

'The heart is beaten with fists' (as it were to punish it for its malignancy and venomousness.

LXXXII. मंत्रिणः In India there is to be found a certain class of persons reputed to possess the Gârudi Vidyâ by which they can cure snake-bites merely by the repetition of some charms or Mantras. They are generally known as snake-charmers or Gârudis.

It must be known that Garuda (the eagle) is the deadly enemy of all sorts of snakes.

LXXXIII. (a) Here we have got a very beautiful and striking metaphor in which the god of love is represented as a skilful fisherman, woman as his net, world as sea, female lips as tempting bait, men as fish and love as fire.

(b) Makaraketana (मकरकेतन) - See Note to stanza XI. supra. It is also necessary to say that Ketu and Dhwaja are equivalent in sense.

LXXXV. The words व्यादीर्घेण &c. which are adjectives qualifying अहिना (अहि snake) are also to be taken as attributes of चक्षुषा (चक्षु=eye). An attempt is made in the translation of the stanza to clear the simile by using appropriate separate epithets for serpent on the one hand and eye on the other.

LXXXVIII. In Sanskrit a prostitute is very appropriately called a पण्यस्त्री or marketwoman, because she sells her person to her customers.

XC. (a) चेट-According to Bharata, Cheta is thus defined.

स्मृतः । See Bharata's Nāṭya Śāstra XXIV. 107.

(b) Vita (विटः) - “वेश्यापचार कुशलो मधुरो दक्षिणः कविः ऊहा पाह क्षमो वाग्मी चतुरश्च विटो भवेत् ।” (भरत नाट्यशास्त्रम् । २८।१०४)

Also refer to our note on stanza XLIX. supra.

XCII. (a) Priyangu (प्रियङ्गु) Name of a creeper which is said to put forth blossoms at the touch of women's feet.

(b) Kunda (कुन्द) a kind of Jasmine (white and delicate).

(c) मन्दार is the coral tree. It is one of the five trees in Indra's paradise. The word Mandāra is also used for Arka and Dhattūra plants.

(d) Yamasadana (यमसदन) - The palace of Yama, the god of death is spoken of as extending over many leagues in the Garudapurāṇa.

XCIV. The same note as that appended to stanza XXXV. (b) may appropriately be repeated here with increased confidence.

XCV. Here is a very ingenious play upon all the adjectives of ब्रूवित् (play of the eyebrows); for, they can also be applied to the word खल (a perverse person). But unfortunately the beauty of the original cannot be preserved in the translation.

XCVII. (a) Wife is generally considered by men as the other half of her husband. Compare the often quoted lines of Milton in the 4th book of his Paradise Lost where Adam thus addresses Eve:

"Whom fly'st thou? whom thou fly'st, of him
thou art,

His flesh, his bone; to give thee being I lent
Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart,
Substantial life, to have thee by my side
Henceforth an individual solace dear;
Part of my soul, I seek thee and thee claim,
My other half."

(b) "प्रियतमा &c alludes to the idea that Siva and Pārvatī form a single body, one half of which is male and the other half female. न यस्मात्परः = to whom there is no superior. The two lines mean that Siva though he is so far under the dominion of Love as to have his wife as one-half of himself, is also the first to withstand love. Cf. Kirāata- XVIII. 31. " (K. T. Telang.)

(c) पार्वती literally means the daughter of a mountain. It is one of the several names of Durgā.

Cf. 'उमा कात्यायनी गौरी काली हैमवतीश्वरी । शिवा भवानी रुद्राणी शर्वाणी सर्व मङ्गला ॥ अपर्णा पार्वती दुर्गा मृडानी चण्डिका म्बिका ॥' इत्यमरः

XCVIII. (a) Vairāgya (वैराग्य) is asceticism or detachment from the world. See also our Note B in the Vairāgyasataka.

(b) Niti (नीति) is motives of policy and prudence including morality. See also our Notes B and C in the Nitisataka.

(c) Sringāra (शृङ्गार) is the first and most important of the nine Rasas and deals with man and woman and their mutual love, as members of the opposite sexes.

(d) The point of the stanza evidently is this : people generally differ very widely in their delights and pursuits.

Here we may also refer to the often quoted passage from the Mahābhārata which runs as follows :-

वेदा विभिन्नाः स्मृतयो विभिन्ना नासौ मुनिर्यस्य मतं न भिन्नम् ।

धर्मस्य तत्त्वं निहितं गुह्यायां महाजनो येन गतः स पन्थाः॥

C. (a) Vilāsa (विलास) is thus defined by Bharata : स्मितपूर्वमथालापो विलास इति कीर्तितः । See Bharata's Nāṭya śāstra. XXII. 33.

(b) The real meaning of the stanza seems to be that the amorous sports and lovely conversations of youthful ladies are always powerful to charm men.

NOTES ON VAIRAGYA ŚATAKA.

A. As to giving the third or last place to Vairāgyasataka Kṛṣṇa Śāstri Mahābala says अथ श्रीमहाज-पिप्रवरो भर्तृहारीद्वितीयं परिणामे वैराग्यजनकं, शृङ्गारशतकं विधायेदानीं वैराग्य-शतकं चिकोर्षुवैराग्यफलस्य दाता शिवापेक्षयान्यो नास्तीति तं वर्णयति ।

B. Virāgya (वैराग्य) literally means absence of affection for the world. See also Note to stanza XCVIII (a) in the Śringārasataka.

I. Yogi (योगी) one well-versed in the practice of Yoga (योग) or union. Mrs. Annie Besant renders the word योग as harmony with the Divine Will.

II. There are three classes of men, those who have knowledge and they do not care for other people's learning through envy; those who have no knowledge and they cannot appreciate; and those who have high position in the world and they do not care for learning, being proud of their greatness. So that there is altogether but a bad lookout for learning and learned men. "
(K. T. Telang.)

III. The Vedānta philosophy teaches us that the acquisition of स्वर्ग itself is of very small importance when compared to मोक्ष or final absolution or emancipation of the soul.

VIII. "The sense is that if a man of strong mind did not see his wife in the state described, he should not go about to beg. It is the family that constrains him to it."
(K. T. Telang.)

It will be seen that the translation of the stanza as rendered by me is somewhat different from the above. Prof. Tawney's version is also similar to that of Mr. K. T. Telang. Here I have preferred to follow the Sanskrit Commentary of Kṛiṣṇa Sāstri Mahābala which gives the purport as विचारवान्जनः पूर्वाङ्गोप विरोधविशिष्टं भार्यो दृष्ट्वाऽपि दुष्टजटारभरणार्थं कल्याण्यमे न याचत इति भावः । The thought thus expressed is far nobler than that explained by Prof. Tawney or Mr. Telang. I am, however, glad to observe that Mahārāja Sewāi Pratāpa Singhji's version of this Ślōka is quite to the point. It runs as follows:—

फट्यो पुरानो चीर ताहि खैचत अरु फारत ।
छोटे मोटे बाल भूख ही भूख पुकारत ।
घर मांही नहीं अन्न नारि हू निर्दय याते ।
भई महा जडदरूप कछू मुख कढति न बाते ।
यह दशा देखि अर बरत चित जीम थरथर तरफत सुख ।
अपने मुजरे उदरहित 'देहि' कहें को सतपुरुष ॥

Mr. Durgā Prasāda's translation of this stanza being neither correct nor good deserves no particular mention in this place. The anonymous copy of the Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari here follows, as usual with it, the Notes of Mr. K. T. Telang.

X. (a) It is a general belief among the people that snakes can live without feeding upon anything but air. The fact is often alluded to by Sanskrit poets. Cf. सर्पो पिबन्ति पवनं न च दुर्वैलास्ते &c.

(b) "The meaning is that there is no scope for the exercise of one's merits, all the energies being absorbed in the struggle for existence." K. T. Telang.

XV. The word कम्बरखण्ड is here used in a double sense of (1) a piece of cloth and (2) cloud.

XVII. Commentators differ in their interpretation of this stanza.

The difficulty particularly lies in the construction of the third line, which Mr. Telang takes to mean—‘wretched by reason of the strong distractions of the enjoyment of greatness old through age.’

Mr. Durgâ Prasâda interprets the verse as follows :—

“Avarice rises with selfishness or bad discrimination, goes with its extinction and culminates with its excess. When the king of gods falls a victim to it, being tempted under the irresistible promptings of biting destitution and old age, there is no talking of man.”

The following version of the Slôka is found in the Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari :—

“The desire for worldly pleasures is allayed as restraint full of discrimination develops and when attachment to objects of sense is great that effect takes place on a wider scale. The Lord of Gods Himself becomes subject to desire, wretched by reason of strong distraction of enjoyment of greatness old through age.”

Prof. Tawney's poetical version runs thus:

“As knowledge grows, content expands, and fell desire abates ;

But worldly joys, if long embraced, a baneful influence gain ;

Thus Indra, like a mortal king, hopes, trembles, loves and hates,

From having held through endless years an undisputed reign.”

I have not been able to find out its version in Maharaja Pratâpa Singhji's Chhappayas. Pandit Rishabhadatta's Hindi translation is usually below the average and hence I have no scruples to omit it here.

The sage commentary of Kṛiṣṇa Sâstri Mahâbala which seems to give the correct sense of the text by his comments upon the stanza is as follows:—

विवेकस्य व्याकोशो विकसनं यस्मिन्स्मिन् शमे विदधति कुर्वति सति, तुजे उन्नते तृष्णायाः परिष्वङ्ग आश्लेषे शाम्यति सति, सा परिणतिः सुखविशेषरूपः परिणामः प्रसरतिरामतिशयेन विस्तारं प्राप्नोति । सा का । यस्यां परिणतो विषये जरया जोर्णमैश्वर्यं, प्रसनं अन्नादि भक्षणं तन्निमित्तो गहनो गम्भीरो य आक्षेपो निन्दा च ताभ्यां कृपण एवंविधो भक्ता देवानामधिपतिरिन्द्रो ऽपि यस्यां परिणतो तृष्णापात्रं तृष्णाभाजनं भवतीति । यस्यां परिणतो विषये साक्षादिन्द्रो ऽपि स्पृहां करोतीत्यर्थः ।

XVIII. Commenting on the meaning of the word Prof. Tawney remarks—"More literally retinue, attendants. This expression falls in with the legend that Bhartrihari was a king and quitted his throne in a fit of disgust."

XXII. (a) For the unparalleled munificence and magnanimity of Paraśurâma,

Cf. कुलाचला यस्य महीं द्विजभ्यः प्रयच्छतः सीमदृषत्वमायुः ।'

बभूवुस्तसर्गजलं समुद्राः स रैणुकेयः श्रियमातनोतु ॥

(b) Bali (बलि)—Name of a demon king, grandson of Prahlâda and the most powerful sovereign of his day. He wrested everything from the gods and reigned absolutely supreme over the whole world. To secure the gods from this catastrophe Vishnu, in the form of a dwarf, came to him and begged of him three steps of ground. This simple request being granted Vishnu assumed an enormous size, covered all of Bali's possessions in two of his steps and putting the third on Bali himself sent him to the Patāla where he is believed to reign still. The story is told in the Bhāgavata.

(c) Of the fourteen spheres, seven are above the Earth and seven below it. They are enumerated as follows :-

- (1) भूलोक, भुवर्लोक, स्वर्लोक, महर्लोक, जनलोक, तपलोक and सत्यलोक;
- (2) अतल, वितल, सुतल, रसातल, महातल, तलातल and पाताल ।

XXIV. The first two lines of the stanza if translated literally would stand thus ; 'What honour is it to kings to have obtained the earth which has not even for an instant remained unenjoyed by multitudes of kings after acquiring it by means of hundreds of battles'.

K. T. Telang.

XXVI. "The following lines of Juvenal may be compared :-

What's Rome to me, what business have I there
I who can neither lie nor falsely swear,
Nor praise my patron's undeserving rhymes.'

(Ancient Classics for English Readers, p. 7.)

Prof. Tawney (Indian Antiquary, Vol. V., p. 3) quotes Burke, Vol. II., p. 106 (Bohn's Ed). The implication is that those persons only who can descend to such occupations find entertainment in the royal household."

K. T. Telang.

XXXI. जह्नुकन्या or जाह्नवी is an epithet of the Ganges. See Rāmāyana Ch. XLIII Book I.

XXXII. Chintāmani (चिन्तामणि) is a fabulous gem supposed to yield to its possessor all desires. It is generally known as the philosopher's stone.

XXXV. स्वः सिन्धु (literally heavenly river) is another name of the Ganges.

XXXVIII. (a) "The two words काल and काली seem to me here to signify the male and female personifications of the Destructive Principle. Now काल is given by the Medinikâra as a name of Mahâkâla or Mahâdeva. काली is well known to be a name of Pârvatî. Mahâdeva is the Deity of Destruction and is also represented in the Purânas as playing with Pârvatî "

K. T. Telang.

Siva and Pârvatî are represented as playing chess with dice in the seven Ślokas (Nos. 123-129) quoted from Mayûra in the Subhâshitâvalî. See also the learned editors' note at p. 8. Bombay Sanskrit Series No. XXXI. The word काल in Sanskrit is derived from the root कल to count and hence it means one who counts. In its secondary sense काल is used both for Time and Śiva. Time is undoubtedly the Counter and hence destroyer of all things and Śiva is the deity of destruction. So there is nothing strange in its being a name both of Time and Śiva. काली is the feminine of काल and consequently represents both Death and Pârvatî.

(b) For similarity of thought, compare the various passages quoted by Prof. Tawney in his Two Centuries of Bhartrihari, p. 69.

XL. (a) केशवमिश्र after quoting the stanza at page 75 of his अलङ्कारशेखर thus remarks : क्लृप्तं क्लृप्तमूढः । अत्र अहिरेव हारो हेयो ननु हारवदहिरप्युपादेय इति बोध्यम् ॥

(b) Govinda in his काव्यप्रदीप cites it as an example of शान्तिरस. According to him and the author of

उदाहरणचंद्रिका — “ वा शब्दाभ्यां द्वयोर्द्वयोस्तुल्यता धोत्यते ”

XLI. “Yôga is one of the systems of Hindu philosophy. Its chief aim is to teach the means by which the human soul may obtain complete union with the Supreme Being. It is defined by Patanjali, the founder of the school, as “the prevention of the modifications of thought by the practice of self-mortification and by keeping the mind continually unaffected by all external influence.”* The final beatitude which is held out as the reward of such devotion, consists in the cessation of all idea of self and of any distinction between matter and spirit.” Mr. Growse.

See also our Note on stanza I supra.

(b) Padmâsana (पद्मासन) is thus defined in the Hathayôgaprâdîpikâ (हठयोगप्रदीपिका) of Swâtâmârâma Yogîndra (स्वात्मारामयोगीन्द्र):—

वामोरुपरि दक्षिणं च चरणं संस्थाप्य वामं तथा दक्षोरुपरि पश्चिमेन विधिना धृत्वा करान्यां हृदम् । अंगुष्ठौ हृदये निधाय त्रिबुक्कं नासाग्रमालोकयेद्देतद्व्याधिनिनाशकारि यमिनां पद्मासनं प्रोच्यते ॥

(c) योगनिश्च At page 79 of the Bombay Sanskrit series No. III., Dr. G. Bühler C. I. E., observes

* “योगश्चित्तवृत्तिनिरोधः”

(पातञ्जलियोगशास्त्रम्)

“योगनिद्रा means originally ‘the sleep induced by the practice of Yoga,’ during which the soul is separated from the body and thereby becomes enabled to see the nature of all things. ‘Here it stands for deep meditation’.”

XLIV. Dr. J. Taylor in his translation of the Prabôdhachandrôdaya incredulously remarks in a footnote that when elephants want the female, or are inflamed from any cause, it is supposed that a certain liquid is secreted from two protuberances situated on the sides of the heads.

But why Supposed? Every one is fully aware of the fact of which the reader needs not be told or assured that in the rutting season the flows of a strong-scented liquid is generally seen on both sides of the frontal protuberances of bull elephants. The usual place from which the rut begins to come out is just behind the ear, but it is not uncommon to see its appearance in some other parts of the elephant’s body. Sanskrit authors are very fond of alluding to elephants in rut, and Bhartrihari himself has proved no exception to the rule as he has mentioned them several times in these Centuries.

XLIII. How beautiful is the metaphor which speaks of Desire as River, &c &c !

XLV. Vata (वट) is a kind of tree with large broad leaves. It is one of the long-living, high-growing, and big-dimensioned trees to be found in pretty abundance both in the towns and forests of India. It being considered a favourite abode of Siva is eagerly sought after by Yogis.

XLVI. "The idea is this: The suppliant of the rich thinks the days too long, as he has to suffer the trouble of constant entreaties, often unsuccessful; the person engaged in the pursuit of worldly objects thinks time too short, as he has never enough of it to all his numerous ends. On the other hand, the philosopher, in the intervals of meditation laughs at both for delusions. During meditation he is of course, unconscious of all these proceedings." K. T. Telang.

XLIX. I would prefer with Mr. Telang, the reading दुकूलैः to बलुम्याः as marking better the contrast with बलकलैः ।

LI. The ten directions are the North, North-east East, Southeast, South, Southwest, West, Northwest, Zenith (above), and Nâdir (below).

LIII. Samâdhi समाधि is thus defined in the 4th Chapter of the हठयोगप्रदीपिका—'सलिले सैन्धवं यद्वत्साम्यं भजति योगतः । तथात्मनसोरेक्यं समाधिरभिधायते' which is translated by Srinivâsa Iyângâr, as follows: "As a grain of salt thrown into the water unites and becomes one with it, a like union between the Mind and the Atmâ is Samâdhi."

See also our Note to stanza

LX (b).

LV. (a) It needs not to be told that there are four principal castes or Varnas among the Hindus; which are named ब्राह्मण, क्षत्रिय, वैश्य and शूद्र. The first three are otherwise known as the Dwijas (द्विजाः) or twiceborn, on account of their two births of (I) actual generation and (II) investiture with the Sacred thread. But according to some, the epithet Dwija

(दिज) is limited only to the Brahmans. Compare

“जन्मना ब्राह्मणो ज्ञेयः संस्कारैर्दिज उच्यते”

(b) Chândāla (चाण्डाल)—A general name for the lowest and most despised of the mixed castes originating from a Sûdra father and a Brahman mother. In the text the word is used for a man of this degraded caste.

LIX. “The implication is that nothing except devotion to Śiva is to be depended upon, as, for instance, the things enumerated.” Telang.

LX. (a) The Dekkan poets are held to be great masters of melody of their sweet mellifluous verses. See Kāvyaḍarsa: श्लेषः प्रसादः समता माधुर्यं सुकुमारता। अर्थव्यक्ति-रुदारत्वमोजःकान्तिसमाधयः। &c &c.

(b) Samādhi (समाधि) according to Nrisimhasaraswati, is व्युत्थाननिरोधसंस्कारयोरभिभवप्रादुर्भावे सति चित्तस्यैकाग्रता-परिणामः समाधिः। See Vedāntasāra subôdhini, p. 55. Mr. K. T. Telang thus explains it according to the Vedāntasāra ‘an exclusive concentration upon the One Entity without distinct and separate consciousness of the knower, the known; and knowing and without even self consciousness’. Also compare, यत्सर्वं द्वन्द्वयोरैक्यं जीवात्मपरमात्मनोः। समस्तनष्टसंकल्पः समाधिः साऽभिधीयते which occurs in the गोरक्षपद्धतिः at verse 86th.

Strictly speaking Samādhi is the eighth and last stage of Yoga. These eight stages of Rājayôga (राजयोग) are (1) Yama (यम), (2) Niyam (नियम), (3) Asana (आसन) (4) Prânâyâma (प्राणायाम), (5) Pratyâhâra (प्रत्याहार), (6) Dhâranâ (धारणा), (7) Dhyâna (ध्यान) and (8) Samādhi (समाधि). But, here, the word Samādhi may be taken to mean perfect and profound absorption of thought into the one object of meditation i. e. the supreme Being. See also our note to stanza LIII. supra.

(c) Chowry--As to the origin of these luxurious royal fans (चमर) vide Chapter 72 Śloka 1 of the बाराहसंहिता where it is said :

देवैः क्षमर्यः किल बालहेतोः सृष्टा हि लक्ष्माक्षरकंदरेषु ।

आपीतवर्णाश्च भवन्ति तासां कृष्णाश्च लाङ्गुलमवाः सिताश्च ॥

Mr. Wilkins in his Fables and Proverbs from Sanskrit observes in his footnote to the word Chamara that it is a kind of whisk made of the tail of a particular species of cow, and sometimes of peacock's feathers finely ornamented, used to chase the flies away.

(d) I am inclined to take the stanza as furnishing internal evidence of Bhartrihari being a king.

(e) In several editions including those of Bombay and Calcutta, this stanza is given a place in more than one Centuries of this poem.

LXII. Palāsa (पलाश) is, according to Mr. Growse, "the Butea frondosa, a tree with scarlet flowers, which precede the new leaves, and when in full blossom make a striking sight, like a fire on the horizon."

LXIII. It will be seen that many persons have been led to translate this stanza in a sense quite contrary to that in which it has here been presented to the reader. For comparison, we would beg to quote the following :

"Our former opinion was, 'You and We are we and You,' (i. e. You are different from we). Oh friend what is become now that we consider you like our selves.
(Mr. Durga Prasad).

To my mind the original text as herein given cannot admit of any other interpretation but that which we have sought to convey in our Hindi and English translation. For the cessation of worldly ties of kinship, friendship &c. in Vairâgya, we have the authority of the Mahâbhârata :

पितामहो ऽ स्मि स्यत्रिरः पितापुत्रश्च भारत ।
ममैव यूयमात्मस्था न मे यूयं न त्रो वयम् ॥

LXVIII. Vidyâdhar (विद्याधर)—A class of demigods or semidivine beings. The name Vidyâdhara is applied to one of the ten species of divine beings. These are enumerated as follows in the Amarakôśa :—

विद्याधराप्सरोवक्षरक्षोगन्धर्वकिन्नराः ।
पिशाचो गुह्यकः सिद्धो भूतो ऽमी देवयोनयः ॥

LXIX. (a) Meru (मेरु)—See our Note LXXX (a) in the Nitīsataka.

(b) Yuga (युग)—See our Note to Stanza LXXXIV. in the Nitīsataka.

LXX. (a) “Actions done in a past life lead to results in the succeeding life, and to obtain freedom from the perpetual round of birth and death thus arising, all कर्म must be destroyed. Cf. Sâtrika Bhâsya, p. 1075.” K. T. Telang.

(b) “The bodies and conditions of transmigrating souls are, according to their works, good or evil in antecedent states from time without beginning. The merits and demerits and the embodiments are from eternity. Seed from plant, and plant from seed, but who shall assign priority to either? From such fruition of merits as long as soul is implicated with body, there is no escape.....

This implication of soul with bodies, animal, vegetable, human, ultrahuman, and divine, is the source of all misery. In all its stages the soul tastes little but pain, sickness, death, and severance from all that it would fain cling to. Even in the highest embodiments there is disparity, and a consequent sense of insufficiency, and there is the certainty of their expiring upon the exhaustion of the merits which procured them. Paradise and places of torment are only stages in the endless journey.....This repeated embodiment of souls results from merits, merits from activity, activity from desires and aversions, desires and aversions from identifying the soul with that which is not soul, with the body, the senses, the intellect. (Gough-in Calcutta Review)."

Prof. Tawney.

LXXI. Kalpa (कल्प) — See Note on Stanza XVI. (a) in Nītisātaka.

LXXIV. Brahma (ब्रह्म) or Brahman (ब्रह्मन्) is the supreme Being, regarded as impersonal and divested of all quality and action. Prof. Apte says that according to the Vedāntists Brahman is both the efficient and the material cause of the visible Universe, the all-pervading soul and spirit of the universe, the essence from which are created things produced and into which they are absorbed.

LXXV. Pātāla (पाताल) is the lowest sphere as explained in Note (c) to Stanza XXII. supra.

LXXVII. (a) Sānta (शान्त) is equal to free from passions.

(b). Muni (मुनि) is a saint. In its original meaning the word signifies one who observes the vow of silence.

LXXVIII. त्रिलोको—The three worlds are enumerated as the (i) heaven, (ii) earth and (iii) hell.

LXXIX. (a) According to Prof. Apte the Vedas or the holy Scriptures of the Hindus were originally three, but a fourth was subsequently added to them, and their number is now generally considered to be four. They are (1) the ऋग्वेद; (2) the यजुर्वेद; (3) the सामवेद; and (4) the अथर्ववेद. According to the strict orthodox faith of the Hindus the Vedas are अपौरुषेय 'not human compositions,' being supposed to be directly revealed by the Supreme Being, and are called 'Śruti' i. e. 'what is heard or revealed' as distinguished from 'Smṛiti,' i. e. what is remembered or is the work of human origin.

(b) The Smṛitis as distinguished from the Vedas are the theological writings from the pen of the Rishis, patriarchs and sages.

(c) Purāṇas (पुराण) are the well-known sacred works of the Hindus, dealing with theology, history, mythology &c. They are eighteen in number viz—

(1) ब्रह्मपुराण; (2) पद्मपुराण; (3) विष्णुपुराण; (4) शिवपुराण; (5) भागवतपुराण; (6) नारदपुराण; (7) मार्कण्डेयपुराण; (8) अग्निपुराण; (9) भविष्यपुराण; (10) ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराण; (11) लिंगपुराण; (12) वराहपुराण; (13) स्कन्दपुराण; (14) वामनपुराण; (15) कूर्मपुराण; (16) मत्स्यपुराण; (17) गरुडपुराण; and (18) ब्रह्माण्डपुराण. It is generally believed that they have all been written by Vyāsa or Vedavyāsa, the son of Parāśara and Satyawatī. The literal meaning of the word

Purâna is old. According to Mr. Wilkins the term purâna (literally ancient) is given to such Hindu books as treat of Creation in general, with the particular genealogy, and history of their gods and heroes of antiquity.

LXXXI. Professor Tawney translates शफरी as the minnow.

LXXXII. Brahma (ब्रह्म)-See Note to stanza LXXIV supra.

LXXXV. (a) Mr. K. T. Telang notes that 'the force of all my delusion being destroyed by the pure knowledge which shines forth in consequence of the great extent of merit resulting from contact with you, I would merge into the Supreme Brahma.'

(b) The body is admittedly composed of the Panchamahâbhûtas or the five elements, viz.-earth water, fire, air and sky or ether.

(c) As a footnote to his poetical version of the stanza, Prof. Tawney quotes the following passage from Green's History of the English People, p. 144 :— "The life of Francis falls like a stream of tender light accross the darkness of the time. He strips himself of all, he flings his very clothes at his father's feet, that he may be one with Nature and God. His passionate verse claims the moon for his sister, the Sun for his brother; he calls on his brother the Wind, and his sister the Water. His last cry was a Welcome, Sister Death."

LXXXIX. Vinâ वीणा is thus explained by Mr. Wilkins in a footnote at p. 120 of Morley's Universal Library No. 30.—“ An instrument of the string kind very much esteemed in India. It is constructed of a long piece of wood upon which a number of steel strings are strained, and which serves also for the finger board it being furnished with frets almost from one extremity to the other, with each end fixed horizontally upon the pole (if the expression be allowed) of a large pumpkin, or an oblate sphere of wood hollowed for the purpose.

XCI. “ People misunderstand the mere cure of pain as itself a pleasure ” K. T. Telang.

XCIV. Mr. Telang here differs from all commentators who unanimously explain दुःखासिकानाम् as referring to the family of the कोस्यं विद्वान् spoken of in the text. However, the learned scholar remarks: “ I cannot say what they mean. But the idea intended seems to be that of proud wealthy men.” However the reader will see for himself the propriety of our following the Sanskrit Commentaries in thus translating the stanza which as herein rendered gives a very intelligent and powerful idea. Kṛiṣṇa Sâstri Mâhabala in prefacing the Ślôka thus sums up its substance: विपद्गते कुटुम्बे स्पृहां कृत्वा दुःखेनः स्थित्यपेक्षया परमसुखदो गन्तातीरं निवासः श्रेयान् ।

C. शून्य is a technical term of the Yoga philosophy, and refers to absolute non-existence. It is also used as a name of Brahman. In Bhartṛhari-nirveda (III. 18) गोरक्षनाथ thus advises भर्तृहरि—विषयेभ्यः समाहृत्य मनः शून्ये निवेशय । स्वयमानन्दमात्मानं स्वप्रकाशमुपैष्यसि ॥

CX. (a) Koorma or Kamatha—See Note to stanza XXXV. (b) in the Nītiśataka.

(b) Dhruva (ध्रुव)—The son of Uttânapâda being slighted by his step-mother left his home with the determination of winning himself a name in the world. By the advice of the seven Rishis he devoted himself to the service of Vishnu, and was finally exalted by the God to the heavens where he shines as the polestar.

(c) ब्रह्माण्ड is the egg of Brahman i. e. the universe.

(d) उदम्बर is a kind of large tree known in Hindustâni by the name of Goolara. The interior of its fruit is the reputed seat of innumerable insects.

CXI. Chakrawâka (चक्रवाक)—Name of a bird. Mr. Growse remarks that the male and female Chakwâ are doomed for ever to nocturnal separation and are said to pass the night on the opposite banks of a river or pond, vainly calling to each other to cross.

CXIV. I think the reading संसारद्वे would be far better than that of the text i. e. संसारान्ते.

CXV. शूलो is a name of Śiva on account of his holding a trident in his hand.

CXVI. Vairāgya See Note to Stanza XCVIII. (a) in the Śringarasaṭaka and also Note B in the Vairagyaṣaṭaka.
